HUSH MONEY ALLEGED

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Sun says Vancouver city council is secretly paying off citizens falsely arrested by police in an apparent effort to keep the cases from being made public.

The newspaper says it obtained copies of minutes of closed council meetings as well as confidential reports from city departments which outline the cases of five persons to which payments have been made since mid-February.

The material was turned over by an unidentified alderman who said he was disturbed at council's action in keeping the payments secret, the newspaper said.

The alderman said the practice has been going on for years and has been continued by the present council, dominated by the Electors Action Movement, which won a majority of seats on council in the December, 1972 elections.

Council members supporting the secrecy say they have done so because morale in the police department would suffer if information on false arrests, including the names of arresting officers, was made public and more people might sue if they realized that some individuals had successfully sued for false arrest, he said.

One case reportedly involved an award of $5,000 to Sharon Lee Moore and her husband, Gary Lloyd Moore, who were arrested during the Gastown disturbance in August of 1971.

An accompanying report said Mrs. Moore was arrested, although she took no part in the disturance and when her husband attempted to stop police, he too was placed in a police vehicle and taken to jail.

NDP Eying Takeover Of Island Bus Lines

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

The provincial government is hoping to purchase all privately-owned bus companies on Vancouver Island so it can greatly expand transit service.

Part of this long-term expansion program includes a new major transit terminal for B.C. Hydro buses, Pacific Stage Lines and possibly streetcars to be located near the legislature, the Times has learned.

The government is hoping to purchase at least some of the local companies before year's end to expand public transit.

Over the longer term, the government is hoping to operate all the bus and coach lines, with the major Victoria public transit centre being located as close to the legislature as possible.

"We are not ruling out the possibility of street cars in Victoria," a government spokesman said.

He said some streets might be designated for streetcars only, others buses only and still others for cars. This plan was in a preliminary discussion stage with the City of Victoria.

The government was also studying the possibility of using the Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway tracks to develop tram travel between cities as an alternative to buses.

The key to the planning would be greater use of rapid transit and less reliance upon cars.

In the immediate future the main target of the provincial government is the hoped-for purchase of Vancouver Island Coach Lines, third largest bus firm in the province.

It runs regularly-scheduled service up-Island as far as Port Hardy. As well it has a regular service between the city and Victoria International Airport.

The government also would like to purchase any small bus firm or tour line that was interested in selling.

A government spokesman said no pressure was being put on companies to sell. But B.C. Hydro was interested in expanding its service and this expansion could interfere with existing companies.

The government was interested in making certain private owners did not suffer economically as a result of expanded government bus services. On the other hand the expansion was necessary and had a high priority with the government.

Woman Dies in City Blaze

PRINCESS ANNE ENGAGED

LONDON (AP) — Buckingham Palace announced today the engagement of Princess Anne to Lieut. Mark Phillips, a commoner.

The announcement came after months of denials from both the 22-year-old princess and the 24-year-old $100-a-week cavalry officer. They have been constant companions since last December.

The announcement brings into the Royal Family a man whose mother does most of her own housekeeping and whose father is only comfortably off as a director of a pork sausage and ice cream firm.

The Buckingham Palace press secretary, Ronald Allison, said the wedding would be in the early autumn — probably November — either in Westminster Abbey or St. George's Chapel on the grounds of Windsor Castle.

No Progress In Truce: Sharp

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The government announced today that Canada will withdraw its 290-man peace observer force from Vietnam by July 31.

"We are prepared if the parties to the (Paris) agreement wish, to stay for a period beyond June 30, but not later than July 31," External Affairs Minister Sharp told the Commons.

"Canada's decision to withdraw is firm and definite, but the additional flexibility should give the parties adequate time to find a replacement for the Canadian delegation," he said.

The minister noted Canada's previous position that it would pull out of the International Commission for Control and Supervision by June 30 if there was not "substantial progress."

He said this progress had not been achieved and Canada therefore would withdraw.

He said the additional 30 days presence in Vietnam would give more time for the parties to find a successor and for the conclusion of negotiations between U.S. and North Vietnamese negotiators in Paris.

The other ICCS members are Poland, Hungary and Indonesia.

The Canadian contingent on the ICCS was dispatched to Vietnam hours after the ceasefire agreement was signed Jan. 27.

Indy Washed Out

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The 57th Indianapolis 500-mile auto race was washed out for a second straight day today after a four-hour 45-minute delay. It was rescheduled for 7 a.m. PDT Wednesday.

Hanging Vote

OTTAWA (FP) — A squeaker vote is expected in the Commons when MPs vote tonight on second reading of a bill to extend the partial ban on capital punishment in Canada for another five years. Opposition party house leaders predict that the abolitionists will win the tight vote.

NATO in Cod War

BRUSSELS (UPI) — Iceland and Britain today accepted an offer by the North Atlantic Treaty Organization to mediate in the cod war between the two countries. Iceland also sent letters of protest to the United Nations Security Council protesting British "aggression."

Dust Halts Flights

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — A swirling dust storm closed Mexico City's international airport for 99 minutes Monday, reduced visibility to one-half block and choked and blinded many of its inhabitants.

Arson Suspected

VANCOUVER (CP) — Arson is suspected in a fire at Exhibition Park racetrack early today which did considerable damage to a straw shed. No horses were injured.

Tax Cuts Due

MONTEBELLO, Que. (CP) — Finance Minister John Turner will serve notice in the Commons today of tax-cutting measures for industries to protect existing jobs and create new ones.

50 Watched in Horror As Canadians Gunned

JOHANNESBURG (Reuter) — The Johannesburg Star published today what it said was the "first detailed account of what really happened" when two Canadian girls were killed by Zambian gunfire at the Victoria Falls earlier this month.

The front-page story, which the newspaper said was the result of a week's investigation, said that "about 50 people watched in horror" while five Zambian soldiers shot dead Christine Sinclair, of Guelph, Ont., wounded American John Crothers "and then sniped for nearly two hours at Marjan Drijber hiding behind a rock in the Zambezi river."

The Star said the report "completely refutes the Zambian explanation" that the tourists were fired at by only one sentry who feared they were about to attack a vital power station on the banks of the Zambezi below the falls.

A Zambian government spokesman said it had been evident that the group "had a mission connected with a threat to Zambia's security.

"Therefore, the sentry on duty could not have taken these people to be innocent. His duty was to defend the power station."

The government said it deeply regretted that the shootings had led to the deaths of innocent people, but added that they should have been warned about areas which were not safe to visit.

Last Friday, Zambian President Kenneth Kaunda wept as he told a gathering that the two Canadian girls had been "shepherded to their deaths" by Rhodesia for propaganda purposes.

According to the report in today's Star, all witnesses to the incident had been "cowed into silence" and "indications in Lusaka are that President Kaunda has had the truth deliberately kept from him by his security forces with the connivance of members of his cabinet, including Grey Zulu, minister of defence."

Reporter Wilf Nussey, whose story did not contain any direct quotes by witnesses, said he had discovered that some of the people who saw the incident "shouted angrily" at the troops to stop shooting.

"Marjan Drijber was finally hit by a burst of machine-gun fire when the troops

MONKEY BUSINESS

CHESSINGTON, ENGLAND (UPI) — The Chessington Zoo has come up with a new way of increasing its chimpanzee population — show some mildly blue chimp sex films.

And if that doesn't work, a spokesman said, the zoo may show the chimps some of the hard-core stuff.

Zoo officials said Monday that they showed chimpanzees at the zoo a British Broadcasting Corp. television documentry showing other chimps kissing and cuddling.

Most of the Chessington chimps loved it and copied every move, a zoo spokesman said.

"We hope to hear the patter of tiny chimpanzee feet here soon, and all thanks to the film." said spokesman Andy Bowen.

Spraying Ban Lifted

TRAIL (CP) — Health Minister Dennis Cocke said Monday he would lift his present ban on spraying remote forest areas on Northern Vancouver Island but would not allow it on 5,000 acres near populated areas.

The minister announced his decision here after discussing the matter by telephone with deputy-minister Dr. G. R. Elliot.

Elliot is to prepare a map showing the allowable limits of spraying the pesticide, known as fenitrothion, Cocke said.

"We will not allow spraying at all in any area where it could be a threat to people," he added.

A halt on spraying was announced by the minister on Thursday.

He said serious doubts had been raised about the use of the nerve-gas type of spray on lands in the Port Alice area owned by Rayonier of Canada, Ltd., MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. and the Crown.

They 'Sold Out'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Fishermen have "again been sold down the river" in the latest reciprocal fishing agreement with the United States, fishermen's union president Homer Stevens charged here.

"I'm disgusted," Stevens fumed.

In return, U.S. trollers will refrain from fishing off the West Coast of Vancouver Island, except for a small area at the entrance to strait of Juan de Fuca.

"It was again a case of Canada backing down to the U.S. policy of taking more than it gives," said Stevens.

Stevens said he disagreed with a statement by Joe Garcia, president of the Pacific Trollers Association, that Canada's compliance with the agreement was a case of going along with the "lesser of two evils."

Garcia said the agreement does increase the existing imbalance in favor of the U.S. of salmon bound for each other's rivers.

But he said it was brought about because of the U.S. policy of absolutely refusing to bring the Alaska fishery into the talks and the trollers association was therefore supporting the treaty as the lesser of the evils.

Garcia said the alternative was total dissolution of any working agreement between the two countries.

"I don't agree with Garcia's views. Canada did not use all the levers it has in negotiating this agreement with the Americans. The points we have were not put forward forcibly by the Canadian delegates," said Stevens.

He said the new agreement

Price-Rigging Claimed Reason for Food Hike

TORONTO — Excessive profiteering, monopoly controls by supermarkets and price rigging led to Canada suffering the second highest rise in food prices among Western countries in 1972, the Ontario Federation of Labor said Monday.

The federation produced figures to show that retail food prices in Canada rose 8.6 per cent during 1972, double that of the United States and only marginally lower than in France.

This represents a 270-300 per cent increase in food costs between the farm gate and the dinner table, a report said.

But the OFL, aiming most of its criticism at supermarket chains, was unable to breakdown supermarket expenditures.

Despite letters to every major supermarket chain asking for details of labor expenses "we received negative replies from everyone," OFL president David Archer said.

"What this report is trying to do is find out who takes the gravy," Archer said.

Archer said the report will be submitted to the federal government in the hope that legislation will be passed to force supermarkets to release these details.

"Monopolistic control of processing, packaging and selling allow major supermarket chains to escalate and rig prices at will, the report stated.

"The poor-mouth posture of the food chain stores presented to the public is in itself a direct contradiction to what is really happening," the report said.

"Chain owners are laughing all the way to the bank."

A freeze on prices at this point "would simply consolidate prices at their highest level and allow them to float even higher when the restrictions were lifted," the report adds.

If also charged supermarket chains with "soaking the poor."

"Prices are usually higher in low-income areas than they are in higher income districts" the report said.

In Ottawa the newly-appointed chairman of the government food prices review board warned, meanwhile, that prices increases will not stop just because the board exists.

Beryl Plumptre said there would be further price increases in the near future and emphasized that while the board can study them and suggest solutions, it has no power to force retailers and processors to hold the line on rising food costs.

Davis Lying, Red-Faced MP Charges

By IAIN HUNTER
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — A Tory MP from Newfoundland angrily accused Fisheries Minister Jack Davis Monday of lying about the Conservative Party's position on coastal fishing limits.

In the Commons Lundrigan called "lies and fabrications" the minister's claim Saturday that the Tories are promoting a 50-mile fishing limit off both coasts compared to the 200-mile limit which the Liberal government claims.

Red in the face, the MP refused to withdraw his charge in the House and repeated it to reporters later outside the chamber while Davis looked on.

"Davis is an absolute and total liar," Lundrigan told reporters hotly.

"He knows he's a liar. He knows it's a fabrication. He knows it was deliberate.

"He should be man enough to stand up for the sake of our system and clarify his remarks," Lundrigan snapped.

The fisheries minister indicated later that he will not take action against Lundrigan, and said that there are statements in the printed record of the debates this session which he could produce to show that his remarks were well-founded.

What caused the furore in the Commons Monday was a speech made by the fisheries minister in St. Andrews, N.B., Saturday, in which he announced Canada's intention to press its claims to the 200-mile fishing limit on both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts.

But he said during that speech that he couldn't resist taunting the Conservatives for their record on the question.

"They are boldly talking about a 50-mile limit. Little Iceland is going for 50 miles so Canada might be so bold to do likewise. That is Conservative thinking for you," Davis had said.

Asked by reporters later if he had lied, Davis replied: "No, I am very careful about anything I say."

He stated that the Tories are stung by his success in pushing Canada's territorial limits seaward and said there are quotes in Hansard which he could produce to show that the Conservatives think Canada should push for a 50-mile limit as Iceland has done.

The message which he was apparently referring to was in a speech by Lundrigan in the House Feb. 15 in which the Newfoundland MP was attacking Davis for not pushing Canada's fishing interests hard enough.

The government won't present any case at next year's Law of the Sea Conference in Chile because "the fishery does not fit into their major strategy for the Canadian nation, he added.

HEAT HITS SKYLAB TEST

HOUSTON (UPI) — Skylab commander Charles (Pete) Conrad told mission control in a secret radio talk today he thought space station temperatures were levelling off in the 80s and this might interfere with an important test of man's ability to work in weightless space.

Conrad said he thought the heat would be satisfactory for the rest of the 28-day mission with the possible exception of a bicycle exerciser designed to see if astronauts are weakened by prolonged exposure to the lack of gravity. (See also Page 16.)

"He allowed how the device does not ride in Skylab as it did on earth and he doesn't think the crew may be able to follow the full protocol (test plans) on it," the National Aeronautics and Space Administration said in summarizing the secret talk.

The private conversation was held at Conrad's request with Christopher Kraft, director of the Johnson Space Centre; astronaut chief Donald Slayton and flight director Neil Hutchinson.

According to ground rules established before the mission began, such secret talks are to be held only in cases of "extreme operational emergency." NASA public affairs officer John King said the talk was not justified under those rules.

. . . BUSES

he could not comment on negotiations for the purchase of the company's five double-decker buses.

"Any announcement will have to come from the other side (the government)," he said.

Other Victoria-area bus companies confirmed they have held talks with Victor Parker, director of the government's bureau of transit services, but only the London Omnibus Tours company referred to the discussions as "negotiations."

Other company spokesmen said their discussions with Parker were exploratory.

However in each case, Parker is reported to have expressed an interest in purchasing each company outright if the owner was agreeable.

Parker was not available for comment this morning.

On Monday he announced he has held talks with private bus companies with the possible intention of taking them over.

At that time he said the government is not going on a "wholesale buying spree."

"We're not in business to take over private interests if they're doing a proper job. Our only interest is in ensuring that proper service is provided.

"But if it becomes impossible for private companies to continue in their role, we'll have to look at other possibilities including ownership of motor coach lines by the government."

Parker said if the bureau determines there is a need for the government to become involved, "then it is my responsibility to report to the government on that need. I'm responsible for looking ahead and to be there where there is a need."

He said the bureau will be analyzing the need throughout the province and determining "how well communities are being served and if there is room for expanded service by the provincial government."

British Columbia Hydro is understood to be planning an expansion of services on the lower mainland, freeing some of their Pacific Stage Line buses for service elsewhere in the province.

If the government purchases Vancouver Island Coach Lines, it is believed the up-Island bus run would become part of the government-owned Pacific Stage Lines service.

The Island bus company is employee-owned, formed when Pacific Stage Lines sold its Victoria-Vancouver run to B.C. Hydro. At that time B.C. Hydro was not interested in the up-Island bus service and the airport run.

Vancouver Island Coach Lines has 48 buses — a new $70,000 vehicle was added today — and is third behind B.C. Hydro (Pacific Stage Lines) and Greyhound, which is an international firm.

Jack Thomas, president of Vancouver Island Coach Lines, confirmed he held discussions with Parker but stressed that no offer was made.

He said he was not eager to sell all or part of the company but would listen to any government offer.

Wayne McArthur, a spokesman for Pacific Commuter (four buses) and Tweed Line Tours (four double-deckers) said he, too, had held discussions with Parker but the talk did not get around to money.

Fisheries 'Sellout'

has worsened for Canadian fishermen an imbalance in which they have lost an average 12 million pounds of salmon each year to the Americans over the past 20 years.

"The reaction of Canadian fishermen will be that their government has sold them down the river," said Stevens.

Stevens said he had made his views known in his advisory capacity during the negotiations, which concluded in Ottawa last Friday after earlier meetings in Washington and Seattle had failed.

"I was opposed to the settlement and I spoke strongly against it," said Stevens.

"There was only one way to counter balance the American threat. We could have said to them to keep all their boats outside Queen Charlotte Sound, Hecate Strait and Dixon Entrance.

"We could also have told them to keep their boats outside the Gulf of St. Lawrence and the Bay of Fundy, on the east coast," said Stevens.

Garcia and Stevens were in agreement on one point: That Canada should continue to press for equalization of fish catch to correct the imbalance they claim now favors the Americans.

Garcia said reciprocal fishing rights are necessary so that Canadian fishermen can harvest Canadian salmon that migrate southward into American waters.

He expressed the hope that further talks in October between the two countries will bring about more realistic solutions to the West Coast salmon problems.

Drivers Keep Plates Under Gov't Scheme

British Columbia drivers — not the vehicles — will retain their licence plate numbers permanently under the new government automobile insurance system, Transportation Minister Robert Strachan said today.

Strachan held a press conference at which he explained the working details of the government insurance plan, which will become effective for all drivers March 1, 1974.

Strachan did not reveal premium rates which will be charged under the new plan. He blamed the lack of figures on the failure of the Insurance Bureau of Canada to include the B.C. drivers statistics in its annual publication of data used by automobile insurers across the country.

At the same time, Strachan indicated he does not favor a system of term payments for insurance premiums.

Under the government plan, licence plate numbers issued to individual drivers will stay with the driver when the person sells or trades his car, truck or other licensed vehicle. If he buys another vehicle, the plates will be put on that vehicle after the purchase is completed.

Strachan explained the new insurance plan as working in this way:

Before March 1, 1974, each B.C. driver will obtain an insurance policy based on his vehicle at the same time that he renews his vehicle's registration. On the driver's birthday, he will obtain an insurance policy based on his driving record.

The latter policy will carry a standard charge of between $8 and $16. Drivers with penalty points for violations will pay increasing premiums which Strachan said will rise "very sharply" according to the number of points.

Optional coverage on the driver's vehicle will be available in a similar manner to the private insurance industry currently operating in B.C.

For the first time, however, coverage for all perils, including fire and theft, will be compulsory. A maximum deductible amount of $200 will likely be used, as in Manitoba and Saskatchewan.

Lesser deductible amounts will be available at increased cost to the driver.

Strachan said 41 claims branches for the Insurance Corporation of B.C. will be established throughout the province. Insurance policies will be available at some of these centres, but most policies will be purchased through individual agents for the corporation.

One claim centre will be established in the Victoria area but Strachan did not divulge the location.

Strachan said he favors lump-sum payments for insurance premiums because they are less costly and simpler to process.

Asked if insurance premiums could be paid with Chargex cards, Strachan conceded that this is a possibility.

Strachan said the present system of demerit points for driving violations will be continued.

Appointments to ICBC positions were also announced:

Hugh B. Earle is appointed senior executive for the automobile plan. Robert J. Jones will be senior executive for underwriting. Robert W. Adams will be senior executive for administration. Gordon Root is a pointed senior executive for marketing.

Minister Resigns

It was the second resignation of a senior Japanese political figure within 24 hours.

Earlier, the speaker of the House of Representatives, Umekichi Nakamura, tendered his resignation after being censured by the opposition for saying he had cheated them in mediating an end to their boycott of parliamentary sittings.

moved to a better vantage point. She screamed and was carried away, apparently dead, by the flooding Zambezi River while the troops continued to shoot at her."

At one point, The Star added, one of the soldiers noticed that Miss Drijber was a woman and told the others to stop firing at her.

But, The Star said, a man in plainclothes looking on remarked that the Arab Black September guerrilla organization had used women to blow up Israeli airliners.

"During all this the Zambian troops were in a state of high agitation, sweating profusely.

"They had been seen before to arrive on duty carrying bottles of beer, but there was no indication whether they were drugged or drunk on this occasion."

Nussey added that Zambian police had warned witnesses, most of them Africans, that they faced "dire penalties" if they talked about the tragedy.

The Star said that people around the junction of the third and fourth gorges, where the tip of a long Rhodesian promontory lies oppostie what is called the Silent Pool and the power station, first heard shots from automatic weapons at shortly before 2 p.m. May 15.

"When the Zambians opened fire they killed Christine Sinclair almost immediately and wounded John Crothers, who fell into a niche behind a rock with his feet towards the power station and lay unmoving.

"Some of the watchers were on the edge of the gorge about 100 metres above the river and others right behind the troops at the bottom, where there is part of the power station complex reached by a cableway or 'trolly.'

"From behind the cover of rocks and bushes, the five Zambians kept on shooting at Crothers. He was reasonably sheltered and bullets spattered the rock around him, chipping off pieces.

"The person who had jumped into the river was around the point from him, up to the shoulders in water, sitting on a submerged shelf and hanging with one arm on to a higher rock, with head resting on the arm.

"The people down below saw long blonde hair and realised it was a woman. Others looking through binoculars from the top saw it too, and then the shouts of protest began.

"Protests were also made that the troops were shooting into another country but the policemen waved this objection away and became angry.

"The troops had been shooting at the woman, Marjan Drijber, but could not hit her from their vantage point nearer the fourth gorge side of the junction.

"So they moved upriver a short distance, taking cover as they went as if under attack from the opposite bank.

"Miss Drijber did not appear to be badly hurt at this stage, if at all, because she was watching alertly and looked towards Mr. Crothers a couple of times.

"The Zambian soldiers set up a new vantage point near the C-station at the bottom of the gorge, where they were roughly three metres above the surface of the river.

"They mounted a machine-gun like a Bren gun on a tripod and most of them stood around it while one prepared to feed ammunition and the other to shoot.

"At this moment, one of the soldiers his rank is not known because they do not wear badges on their camouflage saw the target was a woman and ordered the others not to fire.

"The onlookers heard this with relief. But about 10 minutes later, at about 3:45 p.m., firing started again and Miss Drijber screamed, a high-pitched woman's scream, then vanished into the river.

"The troops continued firing into the water where she had disappeared."

In Ottawa, an external affairs spokesman said Canada is not satisfied with the Zambian explanation of the shooting and has asked for additional investigations.

He said the Canadian government has received different versions of the incident from the Rhodesian and Zambian governments, as well as the Canadian official sent to investigate the incident.

But the spokesman said the government is not prepared to release the different versions because it does not know which is correct.

"We are not in the position to comment at the time being."

the weather

Cloud has been thickening slowly today along the north coast and west coast of Vancouver Island as a new weather system moves in from the Pacific. Temperatures rose sharply in the interior Monday reaching 80 in Lytton — the highest in Canada. The mass of high pressure affecting most of B.C. is expected to move slowly eastward, allowing the new cooler system to move in from the coast. Temperatures in most regions Wednesday will be steady or a little cooler, with some light rain in coastal areas.

Announcing a limited minting of

The First Official Coinage of the British Virgin Islands

"The British Virgin Islands will issue the first official coins in its history on June 30, 1973, honouring its first 200 years of constitutional government with representation."

Derek Cudmore, C.B.E.
Governor of the British Virgin Islands

Those who recognize its significance will have an exceptional opportunity. The opportunity to acquire the very first coins of a government — at the time they are first issued.

This opportunity is open to you now. You can own a complete Proof Set of "The First Official Coinage of the British Virgin Islands" — a historic first issue as well as a collection of unusually beautiful coin of the realm.

The beautiful bird coins of the British Virgin Islands

This new coinage depicts the exotic birds of this fabled paradise. The birds that inhabit the more than 40 islands in this region of the Caribbean are some of the most fascinating and beautiful in the world.

To assure that the designs for these coins would be both authentic and artistic, the British Virgin Islands chose a sculptor who is renowned in the fields of coin design and medallic sculpture. He is Gilroy Roberts, dean of American medallic artists, who sculptured the famous portrait of John F. Kennedy for the U.S. half dollar and whose series of art medals — Roberts Birds — has won widespread acclaim for painstaking attention to detail.

To capture the full beauty of the birds, Mr. Roberts travelled to the Islands to sketch them in their natural surroundings, at rest and in flight. Later, in his studio, he turned his sketches into detailed sculptures from which the coining dies were prepared. The coins were then struck by the skilled craftsmen of The Franklin Mint, the U.S. affiliate of Wellings Mint. The result is a collection of coin of the realm that is, in every sense, a work of art.

1973 Proof Sets available for a Limited Time

The number of Proof Sets minted will be exactly equal to the number ordered by June 30, 1973. No other Proof Sets of this historic first year's issue will be produced. A strict limitation has been imposed on the number of Proof Sets that any one collector may order. Therefore, no order will be accepted for more than 4 Proof Sets. Each complete Proof Set of the 6 coins will be housed in a deluxe presentation case, accompanied by a Certificate of Authenticity certifying to their Proof Status. The official issue price of each Proof Set is $15. Uncirculated specimen sets of the 6 coins will be available at the official issue price of $11.50 per set. These specimen sets, in a vinyl wallet, will be available until the authorized production limit has been reached.

Orders should be mailed by June 30, 1973

To receive your sets of these unusual bird coins — "The First Official Coinage of the British Virgin Islands" — please complete the order form below and mail it directly to Wellings Mint Ltd., 70 Galaxy Blvd., Rexdale, Ontario. The final date for ordering Proof Sets is June 30, 1973. Any orders for Proof Sets postmarked after that date cannot be accepted and will, regretfully, be returned.

A REPRIEVE FOR THE KILT

Quoting the former Liberal prime minister for support, Victoria Conservative MP Allan McKinnon made a plea in the House of Commons to save the kilt.

His request won assurance from Defence Minister James Richardson that kilts and tunics will be preserved in Canada's highland militia units, among them Victoria's Canadian Scottish Regiment (Princess Mary's).

Speaking during adjournment debate, McKinnon asked that the defence department reconsider a decision to end the purchase and maintenance of highland dress in favor of regular Canadian forces uniforms.

Involving Scottish traditions in Canada, McKinnon quoted Sir Wilfrid as saying in 1893: "If I were not French I would choose to be Scottish."

Richardson said no regulation prevents highland units from wearing kilts but policies introduced before he became defence minister had eliminated financial support for their purchase and maintenance.

However, he said a return to former policies can be expected.

The government's policy of making militia soldiers pay for their own kilt prompted a Victoria-sponsored nationwide petition protesting the move. Four hundred signatures were collected in Victoria.

B.C. Approves West Lottery

The B.C. cabinet approved in principle Monday a four-province lottery scheme which would directly involve British Columbians for the first time.

Provincial Secretary Ernie Hall presented a proposal to the cabinet which would see a $200,000 first prize offered four times annually. The scheme would also involve Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba. Tickets would sell for $2.00 or $2.50.

Hall said the cabinet approval will allow him to proceed to the next step of the plan, which is implementation of the lottery scheme in the four provinces.

He plans top discuss potential legal problems with Attorney-General Alex Macdonald in the near future. Macdonald foresees no real problems, however.

Asked about the lottery scheme earlier Monday, Macdonald said the necessary authority has been given by the federal government to the provinces.

Macdonald said about $2 million leaves B.C. annually and goes into lotteries run by a neighboring provincial government which he did not name, except to say it was different in form from other western Canada provincial governments.

Hall said last week the province could realize as much as $2.5 million profit annually from a lottery scheme.

Hall said today it has been decided that five per cent of B.C.'s profit from the lottery would be contributed to the National Olympic Committee for the 1976 Summer Olympic Games in Montreal.

B.C. representatives on a four-province committee are Hugh Ferguson, supervisor of research and statistics for the department of finance and Earl Nelson, administrative officer in charge of lotteries in the attorney-general's department.

No Appearance By Nixon–Ziegler

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — The White House today ruled out as "constitutionally inappropriate" any appearance by President Nixon before the Watergate federal grand jury.

White House press secretary Ronald Ziegler also said that "no consideration . . . at all" is being given to a possible appearance by Nixon before the senate Watergate investigating committee.

Watergate prosecutors earlier told the U.S. Justice Department there is justification for calling Nixon to answer questions, reliable government sources said.

However, the prosecutors and their superiors in the justice department, including assistant attorney-general Henry E. Petersen, believe that the constitution appears to preclude calling an incumbent president before a grand jury, the sources said.

Ziegler said White House counsel J. Fred Buzhardt had directed attorney-general Elliot L. Richardson and special Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox to "find out how this happened and make sure it does not happen again."

Chief U.S. district court judge John J. Sirica issued an immunity order today to compel senate testimony by Roy M. Sheppard, a deliveryman who allegedly was hired to take Watergate documents from the White House.

Air Muslim Being Planned

CHICAGO (AP) — The Black Muslims say they will form a new airline offering full commercial service to the general public.

The announcement was made at ceremonies during the weekend marking the first anniversary of the religious sect's new $4-million temple.

The Muslims own two Convair jets, spokesmen said, and there are plans to negotiate with Japan to buy other aircraft.

Jobless Insurance Costs Skyrocket

OTTAWA (CP) — Cost of the unemployment insurance program — an issue which harrassed the government during last year's election campaign — was about $150 million higher in the first quarter of 1973 than for the same period in 1972.

Latest figures from Statistics Canada show total benefit payments of about $681 million in the first three months of this year. In January, February and March last year, the figure was $533 million.

Higher average benefit payments and a greater number of claimants had offset a drive to cut off payments to alleged abusers of the plan and a recently-improving unemployment situation, causing the higher costs.

Last year, the program proved expensive to the government financially, and possibly politically, as the Conservative opposition raised the insurance costs as an election issue.

Final cost of the unemployment insurance program came to nearly $2 billion for 1972. Included in this were benefit costs totalling $1.873 billion, administrative cost of $22 million and interest on loans of $3 million.

The government recovered $5 million on insurance overpayments.

Unemployment insurance became a campaign issue when it became apparent the government had spent more money on the benefits than planned.

Conservative fire intensified as the government moved to make payments by exceeding the statutory $800 million limit on advances to the benefit account. The bill removing the limit was passed earlier this year.

Stung by opposition charges, the Unemployment Insurance Commission tried to cut down expenses by eliminating from payment persons who were abusing the system.

Last week, Guy Cousineau, UIC chairman, said in the first quarter 88,000 of 144,000 recipients investigated in selected occupational groups had been cut off from payments.

But in spite of this and an improving unemployment situation in recent months, increased payments and a larger number of claimants have raised costs.

Other factors adding to the $150 million increase are the higher wages of those who resort to unemployment insurance than last year, a UIC spokesman says.

Benefits paid in March this year totalled $214 million—up from last March's cost of $200 million, even though actual unemployment for the month dropped in 1973 to 608,000 from 642,000 jobless in the previous year.

The cost of payments in March, 1973, compares with previous layouts of $244 million in January and $223 million in February. In January, 1972, payments totalled $140 million and in February they were $193 million.

In comparison, 1973 unemployment was 688,000 in January and 655,000 in February. For the same months in 1972 the totals were 665,000 and 627,000.

Average weekly payments to recipients have been about $68 this year, compared with 1972 average payments in the same period of $61 to $62.

Part of the increase at least can be laid at the door of the increased basic benefit rate which now ranges between $32 and $107. Last year the rate lay between $20 to $100, depending upon circumstances of past employment.

But a larger number of claimants, more than 1 million for each month in 1973 compared with 1972 totals of just over 900,000, have also added to the cost of payments.

Last year, after costs of the program exceeded UIC estimates, the government moved to increase income in 1973 by about $100 million. They increased employee-employer contributions, raising worker payments into the account to $1 per $100 a week insurable earnings, up from 90 cents in 1972, and raised employer payments to $1.40 per $100 wages paid, up from $1.26.

Three Await Trial

DAWSON CREEK (CP) — Three girls were remanded in custody until Friday when they appeared in juvenile court Monday in connection with a fire which destroyed an elementary school.

The girls, two aged 13 and one aged 15, have been charged with arson, breaking and entering and theft, and breaking and entering with intent.

Two fires destroyed schools in the area early Saturday morning. The girls are charged in connection with the fire which razed the Dawson Creek Elementary School. Another fire soon after destroyed the Tremblay Elementary School. RCMP are continuing their investigation into the second fire.

WHAT YOU DON'T KNOW CAN HURT YOU.

Every year, the accident rate for young workers is higher than with the experienced pros.

Strange, because young workers have better reflexes, better eyes, better ears. But what they don't have is the "sixth sense" you gain with experience.

And that's what hurts.

How do you get "sixth sense"? No mystery. It's a safety attitude. Learning the danger signs. Avoiding the risks or the chancy short-cuts.

If you're a young worker, learn from the pros. They know the ropes. They've learned how to work safely. That way, you can become a pro yourself.

A Fundamental Question

News stories of the gasoline shortage in some states to the south, particularly along the Pacific Coast, create a feeling reminiscent of the movie made from Nevil Shute's novel, On the Beach. The film, in one sequence in a world that had suffered a total nuclear war, showed an exploratory party visiting Seattle. The camera moved through silent, empty streets — an eerie blending of the familiar with a most unreal absence of living human beings.

Something of the same feeling must assail motorists who now find a normally all-night service station shut down in mid-afternoon, and many a regular stopping place for gas "closed until June 1" or longer.

In view of what we have been told for the past few years about the estimated time during which the world's supply of this fuel or that will last, the present exhibition in parts of the United States carries the chill lesson of a preview of what is in store for all of us — unless. The "unless" recognizes the likelihood of new fuels being discovered, new sources of energy tapped, new adaptations of science and technology to replace what for a couple of generations we have come to depend upon as virtually the lifeblood of our modern world.

The silent, empty service station is a warning, and many people are reading the lesson. But there are scores of implications: technical, engineering, political, economic. As the world's greatest user of the so-called fossil fuels the United States will try hardest to maintain a supply for itself.

The prospect of a gradual drying-up of gasoline is one to which Canada should be giving deep consideration. For with scarcity will come heavier outside demand. With a fair supply, and a relatively small consumer demand today — although a rapidly increasing one — Canada is an obvious source of oil for its great neighbor. The answer to the question which this situation will pose could make or break Canada as a nation.

Do we try to save our supply for our own purposes, and risk retaliation in various forms from the oil-thirsty United States? Do we export freely and spend the cash return equally freely, as long as it lasts? Do we bargain closely and wring tough concessions in trade and other areas of interchange from the friend, provider, competitor, customer, rival and potential engulfer with whom we share the continent? Do we write off petroleum as a dwindling asset and throw all our effort into developing the future replacement for this source of energy — tidal power, solar power, nuclear power or others?

Whichever course we take of the many from which we can choose, the effect will be of vital importance to Canada economically, socially, politically and nationally.

It is a much more essential question than that, say, of seeing how much welfare we can pay out of a given amount of national income without collapsing the economy. Or determining by trial and error how much of our natural resources and physical assets we can turn over to foreign control without in time losing control of everything else as well. It is a question which provincial and national governments should be facing today, rather than struggling to see which level of administration can seize the larger share of power.

When, and under what extremities of emergency, will we seriously look for an answer?

Still Fantastic, But Less So

UNITED NATIONS — A curious and potentially dangerous phenomenon is emerging in Europe. The stated objectives of the United States and the Soviet Union are coming to seem more harmonious than the stated objectives of the United States and Western Europe.

This is, as yet, a misleading appearance, true only in superficial ways. It is, of course, not really the case that the United States is closer to Moscow than to its NATO friends.

But if present trends are allowed to continue, what is today only an appearance could become a fact.

Some of the most critical issues facing Europe, and the respective stances of the three parties most directly involved — the Kremlin, Washington, and the Common Market — are these:

● The American military presence. The United States wishes to reduce its costly share in the defence of Western Europe, provided the Soviet bloc makes corresponding adjustments in its military posture so that the balance of power is not adversely affected.

Opinions Differ

The Soviet Union agrees with this objective, though disagreeing on what would constitute balance in the force reductions. Most, if not all, of Western Europe, by contrast, wishes to keep the American military presence at approximately its present level — and does not wish to contribute anything more to its cost.

● Trade. The Soviet bloc is making a major pitch for increased trade and other economic "deals" (Party Secretary Leonid Brezhnev's word) with the West, notably the United States and West Germany. The Kremlin seems prepared to make sweeping concessions in return.

Western Europe, on the contrary, is — at the very least — bargaining hard in its commercial relations with the United States. Gut negotiations on this issue are yet to come, but preliminary moves suggest more conflict than eagerness for co-operation.

By way of footnote, the United States and the Soviet Union also share concern over the exclusiveness and other restrictive policies which seem to be gaining favor within the Common Market, notably in relations between the market and "associated" states. Global competition for economic spheres of influence seems possible, and even likely.

● Summitry and "linkage". Moscow and Washington agree that meetings of heads of state and heads of government can be useful in setting the tone and pattern of future relationships between adversaries. They also have acted on the premise that relationships between countries are an interrelated whole, though Moscow has sometimes grumbled about too much "linkage."

LEONID BREZHNEV
. . . overtures?

French President Georges Pompidou and British Prime Minister Edward Heath, by contrast, agreed this past week to discourage an early NATO summit meeting and called for separate negotiation of issues such as trade, monetary reform and troop dispositions.

Perhaps by coincidence, there is a certain note of similarity — probably more verbal than real — between the kind of Europe which Brezhnev, visiting Bonn, said this past week that he wanted to build and the ingredients of a new Atlantic Charter outlined last month in New York by Presidential Adviser Henry Kissinger.

Brezhnev did not use the phrase, "a new European charter." But he envisaged a "new continent" in place of the one which, until recently, had spawned wars for centuries — "a continent of peace, mutual trust and reciprocally advantageous co-operation among all states."

Merely Words

These are merely words, and they will stir skepticism until or unless translated into more generous bargaining stances. But it is at least worth noting that much of Brezhnev's speech on German television May 21 could have been written and delivered by Kissinger, or by any other major American policymaker.

The United States and the Soviet Union share a broad range of interests, including the removal of sources of strain and potential confrontation between them. One locale of potential confrontation is, and has been for 25 years, Western Europe.

Some Europeans, notably Charles de Gaulle, long feared that Washington and Moscow would one day make a deal over their heads, and that the United States as a consequence would pull out of Europe. This idea has seemed fantastic all during the cold war.

It is still fantastic, but it is less so today than it was a year ago. Communiques like the one which emerged from the Pompidou-Heath meeting this past week, and the unsympathetic response which Kissinger's Atlantic Charter speech seems to have stirred in much of Western Europe, are provoking serious thought about the possibility.

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

Wants Retaliation

Many Canadians must be wondering these days if being a Canadian and travelling overseas is not really a hazard. A person would get this picture from the response of the Canadian Government to the shooting of two Canadian girls on the Rhodesian-Zambian border last week. The Zambian Government have even admitted that it was one of their sentries who cold bloodedly gunned down the two girls. But, the Zambians have also made the claim that the two girls and the two Americans were actually in the Zambezi River swimming towards a power station. They thought the girls were going to blow it up.

All External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp can say to this Zambian Government statement is, "The Zambian Government statement is not acceptable." That is all he can say, no official protest or threats of cutting off aid or pulling out the Canadian National Railways advisors who are at present in Zambia! Could you imagine if it had been the U.S.A., Rhodesia or South Africa who had done the shooting? But no, it seems that if it is the Communists who hold Canadians against their will or if it is some African country, which is hostile to Rhodesia, that murders Canadians, that's in order. Maybe Mr. Sharp and some of the other Canadian officials should pay a visit to the spot where the girls were murdered. I have visited that very spot myself which is just below the renowned Victoria Falls which drop over 300 feet. At this time of the year the Zambezi River is running high and fast. The drop from the bank into the Zambezi from where the girls were murdered is 150 feet. On top of this the river is infested with crocodiles.

The Zambians want us to believe that these girls were not tourists, but revolutionaries? Come on Mr. Sharp, who are our real friends? The Rhodesians who have done nothing to Canadian citizens or Zambians who cold bloodly murder Canadian citizens and then keep their hands held out for aid? I should say Mr. Sharp, your statements are not acceptable. — Phillip D. Butler, Vancouver, B.C.

Insult to Injury

On four successive Saturday evenings I was enjoying the TV presentation of Leo Tolstoy's "War and Peace," when suddenly the story broke and a man's face appeared on the picture with the remark "bad breath is no joke" followed by the rest of this rather repulsive advertisement.

This was on a CBC channel for which the people of this country shell out millions of dollars every year, yet they cannot let us have such a superb show without spoiling it with horrid commercials.

To add insult to injury, this over-subsidized corporation now proposes to squander a whole lot more money and set up a studio here in Victoria — which we need like a hole in the head.

Once in a while there is something good originating on CBC, but as for such things as the queer interviews that emanate from Toronto, and some of their kooky plays — well, anyone that wants to listen to them can already get them on Channel 2, and surely that's enough. — D. Mitchell, 853 Burdett Ave.

Misadventure

It was after one of my children was injured to the extent of requiring hospital and subsequent medical treatment, that I inspected the "Adventure Playground" items at Quadra School. My child's injuries were sustained by being shoved off of one of these items — what appears to be a partial pyramid made of logs.

One glance at this aberration made me thankful that the child was not more seriously injured by the butt end of logs at each corner. How could School Board personnel consider these "pyramids or whatever" to be safe for hundreds of children in close contact to be playing on?

New Hazards?

It is my understanding that a child was recently injured to the extent of a kidney removal due to a fall from one of these hazards. I can visualize other injuries since these monstrosities were installed at the schools.

I urge the School Board to remove them before further injuries occur. — L. H. Propp, 3208 Bellevue Rd.

There appears to be a conflict of social theory and practice in the provincial government's consideration of extended care hospital rates.

Mr. Cocke has informed us, via an address to a medical convention recently, that extended care rates may increase from $1.00 to $5.50 a day. He tells us also that "most" of the extended care patients receive the $200 monthly guaranteed income — and that charging such people $5.50 daily would still leave them "about $40.00 per month" for sundry expenses.

Unless my arithmetic is faulty, I suggest that a 31-day month at $5.50 daily results in $170.50 plus the $10.00 laundry fee charged by hospitals. This leaves the patient $19.50 a month — less than 65c a day to meet his personal needs.

This princely sum is deemed reasonable by our government, seemingly. The same government pays its ministers handsome salaries and looks to donating millions to other countries. Foreign aid should be a federal responsibility. Domestic aid should be one of the prime responsibilities of a province.

The "corporate rip-off" theme so dear to the NDP is a hard one to resolve, but the rip-off by the sick and elderly is handled with ease. The latter can't fight back. They'll probably squander their 65c a day on toothpaste, cigarettes and such, so why worry? — A. C. Tassie, 877 Parklands Drive.

Children's Camp

60 YEARS AGO

From The Times of May 29, 1913:

"Will be pleased to give Challenge cup on conditions mentioned in your letter of April 25 . . . Lipton." This was the text of a wire read yesterday by Secretary Randolph Stuart to the members of the special water events committee of the Victoria Citizens' Committee. It shows the interest which the great sporting baronet, who was here last fall, is taking in the affairs of the carnival and his readiness to help. The trophy will in all probability be given for one of the big sailing events of the carnival, and the race will be decided over a course in the strait visible from the Dallas Road.

Mrs. Noggins and the Juicy Steak of Soybeans Every Sunday

BRUCE HUTCHISON

After her latest visit to Ottawa my neighbor, Mrs. Alfred Noggins, concluded that the state of the nation was far better than the public had yet realized.

"But the Canadian people," she added, "are an ungrateful lot, most of them so stupid that they couldn't even climb out of a Quebec penitentiary at the lunch hour. Like Trudeau says, wot 'ave they got to complain about when there's nothink wrong except the Conservatives' lust for power while the gover'mint clings to office, against its will, only to save the country from Stanfield's ravenous ambition.

"And Lewis despises power, of course, because 'e already controls all the nation's vital policies without it, accordin' to the sacred principles of democracy. No, sir, you won't find any system as good as minority gover'mint with Parliamint safely paralyzed so it can't do any more damage to the Just Society.

"Well, after denouncin' Stanfield for 'is arrogance, Trudeau keeps a low profile by makin' only six grassroot speeches a day, with a television show at night, to prove that 'e isn't thinkin' of an election. And to show 'is own 'umillty, he says the gover'mint welcomes criticism of its regrettable mistakes but the critics are all red necks and reactionaries that never 'ad it so good or deserved it less.

"Anyways the cabinet 'as preserved its solidarity. There'll be no economic controls, says Turner, except over my dead body, and we'll deal with the soarin' price level by other methods when we discover them, maybe, one of these days. There'll be price controls immediately says Trudeau if, by any chance, inflation should rear its ugly 'ead, which we 'ave no reason to expect.

"There's no inflation worth mentionin', says Whelan, the farm minister, and food is sellin' at a bargain. The people should be grateful that they're not like the poor Eskimos as live on expensive blubber, or the black bushmen of Australia as eat locusts and kangaroos. Why, says Whelan, every Canadian family can well afford a thick, juicy steak of soy-beans every Sunday, thanks to our wise management.

"Prices are too 'igh, says Turner. Prices are just right, says Trudeau. Prices are too low, says Whelan. The cabinet is solid all right even if the dollar is a little soft. And why should anyone care about money losin' its value at only about 12 per cent a year, a purely nominal charge to pay for sound administration and a stable economy. Like Uncle 'Erbert said when he deserted his fifth bride and unborn baby, it might be much worse, I might 'ave stayed with you.

"But Lalonde is the one that really understands the art of the impossible. Yes sir, 'e reverses the whole social security system overnight, and all the unchangeable plans laid down last year, and there's no inconsistency, you see, no retreat, because a brand new gover'mint was elected October and if it's all the same men that's a mere coincidence.

"Besides, we've got serious problems to consider. The Americans are runnin' short of oil and if they can't get ours soon they won't be drivin' automobiles any more. But not to worry. Like the late President 'Oover, Mr. Nixon will make sure there's two 'orses in every garage and some luscious plankton in every pot. If the thermostat is turned down next winter never mind, because the standard of livin' is still goin' up fast. The 'ouse may be cold but the economy is red 'ot, the national product is gross and that's wot counts.

"All this talk of boom and bust is only mischievous nonsense invented by the socialists to discredit the private enterprise system. If it soaks itself in scarce gasoline and lights itself on fire like the monks of Vietnam that'll suit Lewis and 'is boys fine and dandy.

"They'll gladly supply the matches for free while explainin' that wages are no cause of the grand conflagration. Just roll back the prices and forget the production costs and then the boom will go on forever, as all the better economists agree.

"You can forget Watergate, too, because no such thing could 'appen in Canada. If you was to bug the telephones all you'd 'ear is a few fuddle-duddles of 'umility from Trudeau, a couple of faint me-toos from Stanfield and a fiendish laugh from Lewis to chill the blood.

"So red necks of the world unite. When the guillotine gets goin' you 'ave nothink to lose but your sunburn, or your 'eads. Meanwhile this is no time to let the snake of politics into Eden and interrupt the 'armony of the democratic process. The gorgeous orchestra of Ottawa is pourin' out a sweet springtime symphony across the land. Away with dull care! Shall we dance? Or, better still, go gatherin' nuts in May when, 'eaven knows, there's plenty to be gathered."

Quicksilver and the Fast Buck

By RUDY MAXA
New Statesman

WASHINGTON—Getting rich, a sweet and ageless topic, was the subject of J. C. Sorrel's oratory one night last month. Speaking to an Arlington, Va., motel meeting room filled with people, pudgy, bubbly J. C. brought his listeners to their feet, chanting and screeching for all the money they could make by playing the game J. C.'s way.

The next day I called Sorrell and asked him to elaborate on his business, him being a lecturer on getting rich and all.

"Business?" asked a surprised-sounding Sorrell. "I'm a self-employed air conditioning repairman."

Was he talking about air conditioning repair the night before at the Arlington motel meeting room? (J. C.'s kind loves to speak in motel meeting rooms.)

"Let me put you on hold for a minute," Sorrell said, sounding a little edgy.

Then a woman came on the line and asked if Mr. Sorrell could return the call because he would be on another line "for a couple of hours."

GLENN W. TURNER raised the art of pyramiding to the level of a worldwide art. He likes to tell people that he is a millionaire and that despite his harelip, perforated eardrum, flat feet, false teeth and toupee — if he can make it, no reason you can't.

Calls Avoided

J. C. Sorrell forgot to return the call. J.C.'s kind often forget to return calls when uncontrolled publicity threatens.

The get-rich-quick urge is alive and doing quite well thank you. Perhaps it is the none-too-subtle message of our advertising which says you can (and should) have everything immediately — and you only have to pay for it in parts. Perhaps it is the peculiar American impatience with having to wait for anything, be it a fine dinner or the next flight. Maybe it is feeling that so many people have so much . . . except you, hamstrung by inflation, taxes and grubby necessities.

Whatever the reason, an on-the-run way of doing business has emerged to cater to anyone — undereducated or overeducated, financially desperate or financially comfortable — who feels that some fast money would sure make things better.

This method of doing business is called pyramiding: an individual invests in a company that grants him the right to recruit more people into the company. For his recruiting he then collects a fat reward.

Most companies that have the look of a pyramid about them work out of motels. Company names can be changed without having to repaint a sign on an office door, rent is paid only as space is needed, no listed phone is required. And mobility is no problem for these men in flashy doubleknit suits, unborn-calfskin boots and bejeweled hands which weave dreams of easy money.

Select Targets

Favorite targets of pyramid hustlers are:

—Warehousemen who have found that a high school diploma doesn't go far.

—Young marrieds from the inner city who want a larger, safer apartment for their children.

—Computer programmers who have decided the future is not in instructing machines.

But upper-middle-income execs have been snagged, too, and consumer agencies' files bulge with tales of little folks on fixed incomes who borrowed, invested and lost big money on a passel of promises and glorious predictions.

The problem is national, now even international. The department of consumer affairs in New York City says pyramid schemes are the No. 1 consumer fraud in the city's metropolitan area.

Attorneys-general have done battle with one pyramid company or another. But the frays have been frustrating ones for the prosecutors, while the take for the pyramiders runs well into the hundreds of millions of dollars.

The reason few pyramid companies have been once-and-for-all closed down is that most states (and federal agencies) are not equipped — either with enough manpower or specific laws — to deal with pyramids' outlandish ways of doing business. And it is difficult to prosecute companies that can change their names and officers like restaurants changing tablecloths.

Pyramid Artist

The son of a South Caroliner sharecropper is generally acknowledged as the person who raised pyramiding to the level of a worldwide art. His name is Glenn W. Turner and he likes hamburgers.

He also likes to tell people that he is a millionaire and, heck, with his harelip, perforated eardrum, flat feet, false teeth and toupee, if he can make it . . . no reason you can't.

Close to 75,000 people agreed with him and invested millions in his two major companies, Koscot and Dare To Be Great. The Securities and Exchange Commission closed down DTBG and various state courts whittled away at Koscot.

Turner himself was indicted last week, along with his lawyer, F. Lee Bailey, on mail fraud and conspiracy charges.

But it is a comment on the universal lure of the pyramid to note that Dare To Be Great is perking along like a good multi-national in Europe and in South America. Turner now rents a ballroom in the Caracas Hilton, hires a translator and tells crowds south of the border about the good, moneyed life. Australia, which has welcomed other pyramiders, beckons.

Back home in the States, Turner is in more than a bit of legal difficulty. But he is still organizing and inspiring companies, promising he will not pyramid, only retail products.

His latest sally is called "Welcome to Our World," a nationwide chain of "mind spas." Similar in concept to health spas, these establishments try to rejuvenate the mind, for a yearly fee, naturally—and may make Glenn W. the Vic Tanny of right-thinking.

The story of another Turner-inspired company, and the stories of other games that have offered so much to so many, are still being played out in motel meeting rooms across the country. You have to be there to learn of them: J. C. Sorrell, and others who play by his rules, don't often return your calls.

There is a photograph of university professor Alfred Hoyte and his wife Marie in the November issue of Ameripress, the slick, in-house publication of the Ameriprise Company. They are standing together, clean cut, smiling hesitantly, under a headline which reads "top ten distributors — 1972." They are listed among the company's top money makers.

Actor Involved

But now, a few months later, the Hoytes speak bitterly of their involvement in Ameriprise, a company whose distributors are supposed to sell home cleaning products and whose vice-president is actor Bob Cummings.

In the begats of the pyramid business, Ameriprise is out of U.S. Universal ("The sun never sets on U.S. Universal," I was told), one of the oldest companies that can apparently thank the pyramid way of doing business for its existence.

Its nationwide cosmetic firm, Holiday Magic, is now eight years old and is the company Glenn Turner worked for before beginning his own wildly successful cosmetic pyramid company, Koscot, in 1967.

"If Turner had stayed with us, he wouldn't be in trouble now," said a U.S. Universal employee recently, a dubious assumption at best, since, in a January, 1971, complaint, the FTC held that Holiday Magic "operates in the nature of a lottery, engages in false, misleading and deceptive practices including misrepresentation of earning potential."

'General' Aim

The Hoytes' experience with Universal's newer company, Ameriprise, was that the selling of home cleaning products was secondary to recruiting new investors. As the business was outlined to them, an individual could become a master distributor for $3,000, receiving in return $4,500 in retail products and a 50 per cent buying discount on products.

The top level of the pyramid is that of general distributor. To become a general, and thereby be permitted to bring in other generals for almost a $4,000 commission, a master must attend two training schools $400 and submit a $3,000 cheque to be held in escrow until he has replaced himself with another master.

It is a complicated system but one that can make almost anyone rich, according to Lillian Wheatle, a company trainer who told me I could work only 15 hours a week and bring in three generals to earn $10,000 a year. Or I could recruit six generals and make $22,000. Or I could quit my job, recruit full-time and bring in one head a month for an annual income of $44,000. Plus I would then have 12 masters who would want to become generals and would have to pay me for the privilege. Oh, yes, there's the commissions from retail sales by my recruits, too.

"It just goes on and on and on," Lilliam Wheatle told me brightly.

It did not go on and on for the Hoytes, who realized six months after they had joined Ameriprise that all was not as it had seemed.

"The essential misrepresenation is that you're told you can make $5,000 a month selling retail but there's really no chance to do that," Hoyte says. "There's a meeting every night in which your instructor general whips you into bringing other people in. You have to answer to him if you don't."

Training Given

Besides investing several thousand dollars to have the right to sell home care products, the Hoytes were convinced by Ameriprise to establish a regional training centre. At the suggestion of Ameriprise, they spent $12,000 refinishing the top floor of a downtown office building with the verbal understanding they would receive 1 per cent of all District of Columbia's sales and that the company would soon buy the facility from them.

Hoyte says he received several hundred dollars in commissions but he still has a year's lease on the offices to pay off. Training goes on in area motels without benefit of the Hoytes, who are now out of Ameriprise but in debt.

"My mistake was when I looked at the thing it looked quite logical and quite fair on paper," Hoyte remembers regretfully. "But it's not like it is on paper. The people don't really make the money."

Glenn W. Turner has news for those business magazines that called him the "pyramid king": He is going straight, no more head-hunting businesses.

The sharecropper's son has travelled a rocky road since his first company appeared in 1967. Then, the flagship company of Turner Enterprises was Koscot, a cosmetic company that let an investor sell cosmetics and, mostly, recruit other salesmen for a healthy fee.

BAILEY
. . . also indicted

In 1970, Koscot was overshadowed by Dare To Be Great, the motivation course. By the time DTBG was closed down in the summer of 1972, Turner's followers had come to know the pyramid game the same way some truck drivers know the interstate highway system: by heart.

It didn't matter that Koscot and Dare To Be Great were on the decline, it didn't matter that Turner was beleaguered with lawsuits; just give a pyramid player a marketing plan and a company name and he'll run with it.

In a dizzying series of diversifications, Turner's chief lieutenants in the field set up companies that obtained their products and recruiting impetus from Corporate Consulting Services, a Florida company headed by Turner's brother. Another company hired Turner to consult the splinter companies across the nation. In that way he neatly excluded his new offspring from his legal problems while assuring himself of an income from consulting his former employees.

Splinters Split

Now those splinter companies have disbanded and the Turner family is coming together under one name again. The company is Camelon and its regional vice-president is Dave Sullivan.

Both Sullivan and one of Turner's closest corporate advisers say Camelon is finally what Turner has worked for all along: a legitimate, honest-to-goodness, this-is-the-real-thing . . . retail sales organization. No headhunting, no pyramiding, just an efficient retail sales company with Glenn Turner as inspiration.

Camelon is headed by Harry Atkinson, a weather-beaten, potbellied former career sailor called "uncle Harry" by Turner's home office crew in Orlando, Fla., because he is Turner's uncle. Turner does not own a share of the stock in Camelon, a company represenative says, though he is expected to consult and encourage Camelon's growth.

"There's nothing colorful about this company, nothing you could write to make people want to turn the page," says Sullivan, a handsome, tight-lipped fellow who is in charge of recruiting a sales force in Delaware, Maryland, the District of Columbia and Pennsylvania. "Our company is based on truth and honesty."

Sullivan is sitting in a dimly lit, bordello-red suite at Arlington's Hospitality House motel. He says he used to be a beer-drinking railroad worker in Ohio before someone introduced him to Dare To Be Great. When the operation was shut down in Ohio, Sullivan moved eastward and helped recruit in Baltimore. When DTBG was put out of business nationwide, he ran his own company which was connected to the company run by Glenn Turner's brother.

"When I was in the railroad I never stayed in a motel, let alone a suite," Sullivan says with a trace of buckeye awe.

He begins to explain Camelon to this reporter, who in the past has been skeptical of some of Sullivan's business dealings. He wants to make the reporter understand that Camelon could give people a real chance to make the long leap to wealth and happiness.

Many Products

Sullivan says Camelon markets cosmetics, fire alarms, cookware, vitamins, home cleaning products and mink accessories door-to-door or through home party presentations.

Products are sold through three levels, beginning with the position of a salesman, who receives a 25 per cent buying discount and is usually hired by a sales representative. A sales representative enjoys a 30 per cent buying discount on products. For this right he pays Camelon $600. About half of that total covers sales training in Washington, the other half covers the cost to the company to keep the sales rep on the books. Nobody, Sullivan says repeatedly, receives a fee for bringing a sales rep into Camelon.

The third and highest level in Camelon is that of a senior sales rep, who pays another $600 (for a total investment of $1,200 and enjoys a 40 per cent discount in buying products from the company. The $600 covers a week of training in Florida, Sullivan says, all expenses paid except transportation.

A senior sales rep must also replace himself (by bringing in another sales rep for no commission), Sullivan says, though one of Turner's legal advisers who is familiar with the Camelon marketing program disputes that point. The replacement factor is not a requirement, he says. Furthermore, a sales rep can move up to the position of senior rep by generating a $4,800 volume in retail sales, thereby obviating the additional $600.

Currently Sullivan and his associates (such as air conditioning repairman J. C. Sorrell) are recruiting sales persons in the same high-pressure weekend meetings that characterized previous Turner-controlled or Turner-inspired ventures. But it is too soon to tell if Turner has succeeded in setting his course for retail waters or whether the legal sins of his old companies will be visited on Camelon; recruiting has just begun. Sullivan assures critics that soon all the current recruiters will be out on the street selling door-to-door, just like the recruits.

Strictly Retail?

One attorney who has had extensive dealings in litigation against Turner says he is wary: "It looks to me like Camelon is a short form for Chameleon which is the same old Turner just turned another color," comments James Joseph.

But Turner's supporters say if Camelon is given a chance to get off the ground its detractors will see that it is strictly a retail sales organization on par with, say, Avon or Tupperware. If that is so, and if Turner brings his tremendous ability to persuade people to follow him to bear on Camelon, any Turner disciple will tell you it will be the fast growing company in America.

Not all of Turner's disciples are still plugged into his corporate world in Orlando as Sullivan of Camelon is. Some, like thin-haired but handsome "Doc" Holiday, left Turner and his legal problems and now are trying to play the pyramid game without invoking Turner's name or spirit.

A year ago, Doc, also known as Robert Holondak, Richard Holliday or Charles Hallenack, according to court records, held crowds of thousands in his hands at Washington's Sheraton Park Hotel as he preached Dare To Be Great to audiences culled from a five-state area. He was one of the best crowd managers Dare To Be Great had, and Doc was often saved for the all-important "close" part of the program, that time when a sponsor would ask his guest to write out that hefty cheque.

Pitch Spurted

Now Doc Holiday is co-owner of Spec-31, a young firm that claims to be operating in 10 states. Nine people attended a recent meeting at the Hospitality House motel in Arlington. Four were brought there after answering "yes" to the same question Doc used to ask strangers in the old days: "How would you like to be rich?"

Doc talks in spurts. He machine-guns phrases such as "making-money-quick" and he pauses, not at the end of sentences, but between challenges, as in: "Can you?" "Make the kind of income you've only dreamed about?" His patter is smooth but a bit too well-rehearsed, an observation heightened by watching a man who once would not consider a room of only nine people worth his time; his presentation is geared toward large crowds, not modest gatherings.

Spec-31, the guests learned, stood for security and protection for everyone in the community, the 31 represented 31 good reasons why everyone should buy the Spec-31, a box that looked like a small stereo receiver with an antenna protruding from the centre of the top . . .

Hoodlum Army Adds to Woe Of Refugees

By GAVIN YOUNG
London Observer

"Anything for a quiet life," some Lebanese were saying as their army battled the Palestinian guerrillas. The people who say this are generally Christian. The Moslems — or many of them — still back the Palestinian resistance.

The Christians, if they are poor, want a quiet life at all costs, and if they are rich they want to get richer. Both find the anguished convulsions of the tormented and homeless Palestinians a damned nuisance.

The military censors are keen to hide anything that draws attention to the differing loyalties of the Christians and Muslims. There are about 800,000 Christians and 550,000 Moslems in Lebanon's 2,250,000 people. The censors even go so far as to black out in newspaper columns the first name of their own army commander, General Ghanem: it is Iskander, an Arabisation of the name Alexander, and reveals immediately to anyone who does not already know that he is a Christian.

But the friction is there all right. It could be seen in a most unattractively brutal form during the heavy fighting this month around a Christian Palestinian refugee camp which was attacked by the Lebanese army using heavy artillery, heavy mortars and tanks, and defended by Palestinians both Christian and Moslems.

Behind the army front line correspondents saw, were a number of cars filled with automatic weapons. From these cars descended a motley crew of wild young men, bizarrely uniformed. They were the thug element in the extreme right-wing Christian Falangist movement whose political manifestation is led by Pierre Gemayel, a thin, sunken-eyes Lebanese, with swept-back, grey hair.

The young Falangists took every opportunity to beat up Palestinian prisoners, kicking them on the ground with obvious and unrestrained glee, spitting and cursing as they did so.

Some newspaper pictures later showed worse than that: a young Palestinian bayoneted in the chest and his throat cut. Of course, when shooting starts unpleasant things happen.

Such hatred naturally serves Israeli purposes very well. If Palestinians infiltrate into Israel (they do little of that these days) the Israelis have struck back — very often massively and without worrying too much who is in the way. Scores of innocent Lebanese civilians have been killed in the border areas in this way. Thus, it is understandable that many Lebanese will resent the Palestinian provocation that brought this Israeli retribution. Often this resentment will take the form of active collaboration with Israel or its agents against the Palestinian guerrilla groups in Lebanon.

The army is Maronite (Lebanese-Christian) controlled. For months it has harassed the Palestinians. There have been sweeps and arrests — 50 alone in the single month before the Israeli raid, all without provocation or justification, say usually more or less level-headed Palestinians. Their men have been turned off buses, insulted by Lebanese gendarmes, beaten up in the street.

Are such things likely to lead to a deliberate shoot-out, done under orders from high up? No one can tell now. Asked, head-on, what they think, Palestinian leaders wisely play down the religious factor in this unsavory conflict.

Esplanade Section to Be Apartment Free

Oak Bay council will draw up a bylaw to prevent the building of any more apartments on the two Esplanade blocks adjacent to Willows Park.

Pressure has been rising to have the area zoned back from apartments to single-family dwellings and eight homeowners have already voluntarily asked for the "zoning down."

The area has been zoned for apartments since 1927.

"It is the only fair thing we can do for these people," Ald. Brian Smith said Monday night. "This is the major sandy beach in Greater Victoria. They (the residents) didn't realize the area has been apartment-zoned for 30 or 40 years.

"I think we should take the bull by the horns and step down."

Taxpayers attending cheered.

Noting that Smith had gone "through a lot of soul searching" before making his decision, Goult said, "I commend him on his courage."

Ald. Douglas Watts observed he would like to know to what extent estate duties have been paid on the properties involved.

Fifteen letters were received opposing the construction of any more apartments in the area.

Mrs. Donald Horton of 1633 Beach was one of those attending the meeting.

She said she and her husband wanted to have their property zoned back "for the sake of the area" even though it would mean a monetary loss.

Ald. Shirley Dowell said those residents who had asked council to have their properties zoned back should be made "honorary citizens of Oak Bay because of the very wonderful and unselfish thing they have done."

After deciding to draw up a bylaw for zoning down the two blocks, council voted to send letters of commendation to those who had already asked for the rezoning.

CARS ORDERED UNDERGROUND

Oak Bay council passed a bylaw Monday night which will require underground parking be provided for new buildings built in the Newport block adjacent to Windsor Park.

The decision was made in spite of objections voiced by developer Jim Mace and Newport merchants.

Mace said he was representing his own company and had also been authorized by Texaco Canada (who own property on the corner of Newport and Windsor) to have their objections registered.

Grocer E. A. Southwell asked, "Why do we have to have it done here when they don't have it (underground parking) on the (Oak Bay) avenue?"

Photographer Jorgen Svendsen and tailor Joseph Grosso also spoke against the bylaw.

A letter of protest was received from Harry Gladwell, president of V. I. Auto Finance Ltd. and owner of Mount Baker Apartments on the block, also objecting to the bylaw.

Watts noted the bylaw was necessary to keep up the appearance of the neighborhood, which is close to Oak Bay's busiest park and the beach.

Oil Firms Win First Round By Stalling Self-Serve Ban

Representatives of major gas companies succeeded Monday in stalling an Oak Bay bylaw banning self-service stations.

Council's fire and zoning committees will study the matter.

Mayor Frances Elford voted with Ald. Douglas Watts and Ald. Brian Smith to have the bylaw quashed until the study has been made.

Gulf Oil's representative from Vancouver contended that self-service stations allowed motorists to buy gas for less, presented no extra fire risk in spite of reduced staff and generated no traffic problem in peak hours.

A representative from Shell Canada agreed.

An Imperial Oil spokesman said if it is considered a good thing to establish self-service stations in Oak Bay they should have the right to do so.

"The whole purpose of these stations," Ald. Douglas McLelland said, "is to generate more business — more traffic."

"We really don't want more cars," said Ald. Shirley Dowell, "and we'll have them. This was made very clear by the very polished public relations man that came over from Vancouver."

Both Watts and Smith asserted opinions should be received from the fire marshal and others before self-service stations were banned.

"We shouldn't shut the door completely," Smith said.

In other business:

— Council studied plans by Yennadon Holdings Ltd. to build eight terrace houses on the corner of Oak Bay and Yale — six of them two-bedroom units.

— Council decided to share the costs of the Landlord and Tenant Advisory Bureau as suggested by Victoria. Victoria has suggested that the four core municipalities, plus Central Saanich, North Saanich and Sidney contribute to the 1973 budget of $12,854.

— Council passed a bylaw rezoning 2108 Oak Bay and 1565 Elgin from apartments to dental clinic.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING
WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION BOARD
FIRST AID REGULATIONS

A labour-management-WCB committee has prepared draft proposals for changes to the Workmen's Compensation Board First Aid Regulations. Copies of the proposals have been mailed to major labour and management organizations throughout the province and are available for examination at WCB offices located in 12 centres in B.C.

Interested parties, having comments on the draft proposals, are requested to submit written briefs to the Workmen's Compensation Board no later than June 15, 1973.

A public hearing on the proposed regulations will be held at the offices of Workmen's Compensation Board of B.C., 5255 Heather Street, Vancouver at:

You know what you want.
You just don't know it's a Toshiba.

You say you're looking for a handy little cassette recorder with all the big features like a built-in mike, automatic shutoff, pause control, automatic level control, IC head, battery and level meters, tape counter, and push button operation. But you just can't put a name to it? It's a Toshiba. Model #KT 216C. And, if you want it with a built-in AM/FM radio, it's called a Toshiba too. Model #RT 293F.

You see, this happens to us all the time. People ask things like: "Where can I get a really great AM/FM Short Wave portable radio, with a ceramic filter to cut down FM interstation static and a Field Effect Transistor to pull in weak signals?" They don't realize it, but that description fits our IC-700 right down to its last integrated circuit. Then we hear: "Somebody must make a 100% solid state black and white TV that doesn't weigh more than 12 pounds or cost more than $150.00." Somebody does. Us.

Or, again: "Lead me to a solid state AM/FM digital clock radio with both an alarm and a sleep timer for less than $70.00, and I'll be your friend for life." What can we say, "Give us $69.95 and it's yours?"

That sounds a little high-pressure, and we're really not that way.

All we want people to know is that, if you're in the market for portable, table or clock radios (suggested list from $19.95 to $199.95), cassette recorders (from $69.95 to $169.95), or portable televisions with all the newest features plus rugged good looks (from $139.95 to $199.95)— well then you're in the market for a Toshiba.

You may not know it yet, but you are.

'Hear That, You're Going to Die'

"I shot you in the guts and you're going to die. You hear that, you're going to die."

Charlie Scarr, 27, the victim of a Jan. 23 Esquimalt shooting which resulted in a charge of attempted murder against John Howard McGee, told his version of the story to a B.C. Supreme Court jury Monday.

McGee, 27, of 819 Condor, had invited Scarr and a man named Larry Shaw to his home to look at his gun collection. McGee's girlfriend, identified only as Miss Gow, was also there.

The woman had gone to bed and the three men began to argue in the living room, said Scarr.

Miss Gow appeared in the bedroom doorway and asked them to calm down. The conversation subsided for a short time and then flared again. The woman went into the living room and began swearing at Scarr who swore back, said Scarr.

"Either you get a gun and shoot this bastard or I will," she said to McGee.

"I'm going to kill you," said McGee as he followed her out of the room.

Shaw went into the bedroom after the two and yelled back to Scarr, "Charlie, they're getting guns."

"Look, you guys have been bugging me all night to see these guns. I'm just going to get them to show to you," said McGee.

"I really felt weird. I knew something was wrong," Scarr told the court.

As Shaw and Scarr were about to leave, McGee and the woman came out of the bedroom.

"He had a gun in his hand . . . it looked like he was either pushing the safety or still loading it . . . he had it down between his legs as he was walking in," said Scarr.

SECOND SECTION

McGee told the woman to "sit down by Larry and if he bugs you, shoot him," said Scarr.

"He had the gun down between his legs and he just raised it and pointed it at my head," he said.

The gun was lowered to Scarr's chest after McGee's hand began to shake.

"Don't kill us . . . just let us walk out that door," said Scarr.

"If you go near that door I'll kill you right now," said McGee.

In an attempt to disarm him, Scarr moved slowly toward McGee. McGee yelled "and pulled the trigger," Scarr testified.

After the shot, Scarr "advanced toward him and grabbed his forearm." He pried some of his fingers loose and the gun dropped to the floor.

Shaw was yelling in the background, "Charlie, did he really shoot you?" Scarr testified.

"Yeah, he shot me. He got me right in the guts," was the reply.

Scarr quoted the accused as saying, "Yeah Charlie, I shot you in the guts and now you're going to die. You hear that, you're going to die."

Shaw then appeared behind McGee with a gun saying, "You shot Charlie. You dirty bastard, you shot Charlie," Scarr testified.

"Shoot him," said Scarr. Shaw refused.

As Shaw was holding the gun on McGee he "was whining and begging for mercy," said Scarr. The girl was "hysterical" in the background.

Scarr made his way outside, was unable to find his car, and collapsed on the boulevard.

Shaw went to a neighbor's house then returned to Scarr's car and sat on the front seat with the door open. McGee appeared on the front porch and threated to shoot Shaw if he moved, Scarr testified.

"The police finally arrived," said Scarr.

In the courtroom, Scarr was not permitted to relate any conversation that took place during the evening in the absence of McGee.

Red Cross Can Save Aid Group

By SUSAN RUTTAN
Times Staff

The Red Cross holds the key to the survival of a Local Initiatives Project home aid program it sponsors — unless another sponsor is found.

The Canadian Red Cross Society Home Aid Group has an excellent chance of getting a grant extension to the end of November, John Atcheson, Canada Manpower's Island co-ordinator of direct employment, said today.

But to get the extension beyond the present May 31 deadline, the group's sponsor, the Red Cross, must apply for it, he said.

"At that time she indicated that the Red Cross didn't want to carry it on."

Atcheson feels the home aid group is "one of the really good projects" and he is prepared to look for another sponsor to replace the Red Cross.

Mrs. Medley said today: "It seems to have served its purpose," of the L.I.P. project, which has employed eight women as free homemakers for the past 14 months.

The people the L.I.P. workers were helping are eligible for help through welfare, and the provincial government is doing more for elderly people than ever before, she said.

"In the meantime nobody's going to suffer," said Mrs. Medley.

Mrs. Medley said she wouldn't consider applying for a grant extension until she had received the last federal payment on the present grant.

Atcheson said this 10 per cent holdback on grant money at the end of the project is standard procedure, experienced by all L.I.P. projects.

Curtis to Call Andras

Saanich MLA Hugh Curtis said today he will wire Manpower Minister Robert Andras expressing his support for the home aid project.

Curtis has already written Victoria MP Allan McKinnon protesting termination of the project.

Curtis added the project was good both in its service to the community and in its employment of the eight women.

"I sense that the Red Cross is on the defensive about the thing," he said.

"The whole thing has been blown out of all proportion and I'm only sorry Curtis didn't get in touch with me," said Mrs. Medley.

Red Cross homemakers can take care of any elderly or ill people now cared for by the free LIP workers, she said. The standard Red Cross fee of $2.25 an hour for homemaker service is waived for people who can't afford to pay it.

"We have never yet turned down a legitimate claim on us because of money," said Mrs. Medley.

Mrs. Evelyn Nieman, who heads the LIP group and is hoping somehow to carry it on, said the group has 65 active cases at present, mainly elderly.

Atcheson said he has got Ottawa approval to invite seven humanitarian LIP projects in the area, including the home aid program, to apply for extensions till the end of November.

Most have already sent in their applications, he said.

He said he would consider asking some group such as the Victoria Order of Nurses to assume sponsorship and apply for an extension.

"We have switched sponsors on other occasions," he said.

$14,000 To 'Talk' With Killer Whales

By DON VIPOND

Is the day coming when man will talk to the animals?

An expedition leaving Victoria soon — one which has been compared to the "Kon-Tiki" — hopes to make one of the opening moves.

Bankrolled by a $14,000 federal grant, four young men will sail up the west coast of Vancouver Island early in June to try opening a face-to-face dialogue with killer whales in their own world.

They go in a 32-foot yawl powered by sails alone, with a musician and a keyboard which can transmit sound under water, with the blessing of local scientists and with a conviction it's time man tried a sociable meeting with a marine creature which some day may teach him a good deal.

Leading the expedition is Bruce Bott, at 25 an experienced sailor and diver who has worked with killer whales at Sealand and owner of the yawl "Four Winds."

With him will be musician and sound man Eric Hoyt, cameramen Peter Vatcher and Michael O'Neill.

Aboard will be about $25,000 worth of sound equipment for both transmitting and taping, diving gear and underwater cameras, bought, loaned, donated or scrounged for what is called project Apex.

Organization behind the project is the Ocean Life Systems Society, a non-profit local group which lists among its objectives determining man's relationship with the ocean and its inhabitants.

The society is also dedicated to tackling the job in a way which seeks a rapport with marine life and to documenting and sharing its experience with the public. The project Apex crew will make a movie of this summer's expedition.

Bott said the Four Winds will pause at isolated coves and bays on the West Coast en route to Blackfish Sound near the Queen Charlottes, "to make ourselves available to an encounter with killer whales."

The choice of sails only (apart from two 14-foot sweeps) is deliberate. The Four Winds wants to meet the whales in as close to a natural setting as possible. The crew will keep a 24-hour watch.

Killer whales talk to each other, sometimes in patterns. The sound gear can record that chatter and the keyboard could duplicate patterns, sending them back.

The underwater cameras are "in case we are invited in." Each of the crew will keep a log, recording his own observations and impressions.

Off the north end of Vancouver Island the Four Winds will meet three more members of the project. Grahame Ellis, the man who first trained Haida at Sealand, Jim Hunter and Jeremy Boultbee will conduct parallel studies using a powered rubber boat.

Bott sees the project as part of a much-needed ecological survey by man, an audit of the life the oceans nurture. From this must come an understanding of how man relates to marine life, he says. The society has plans for continuing research.

In a letter to the Opportunities For Youth program in support of the grant application, George Mackie, chairman of UVic's biology department, praised the "perceptive" approach to learning more about whales in their natural habitat.

"Important biological insights may well result," he wrote.

"The study has additional value in its potential for increasing public awareness of the almost human attributes of whales and of the need to treat them as something more than spectator objects in marine zoos or sources of blubber.

"I fully expect this project to capture the public imagination in much the same way that Kon-Tiki did."

In a similar letter of support, provincial museum director Bristol Foster said knowledge of killer whales in their natural habitat is so sparse the project is bound to produce useful information and possibly make a major contribution to scientific knowledge.

Christopher Brown, executive assistant at the Vancouver Public Aquarium, wrote that his institution is a good example of the kind of operation could make use of the material produced.

In the spring of 1970, an expedition from Sealand trapped five killer whales behind nets in Pedder Bay. Bruce was one of the divers charged with ensuring the nets were intact.

He and another diver helped rescue Chimo, the white whale which died last year, when she became enmeshed in a loose net and was drowning. Her cries for help could be heard for about 500 yards under water, he recalled.

Although the other whales swam by at arm's length while the divers were hacking away the net with knives, none interfered with the rescue.

They knew what the divers were doing, says Bruce.

And while several of the whales were able to burst through the nets the first night and escape, all five had returned by the morning.

Why did the whales come back?

Bruce suspects it is not man that is making the first attempt to open the conversation between man and killer whale.

Former Postman 'Free to Leave'

Swanbeck, 43, was convicted May 15 of stealing mail and mailbags which had been missing three years before being discovered by Victoria police.

In addressing the judge, defence counsel Harold Turnham said the charge, theft of the mails, has "very sinister overtones," but Parliament had removed the minimum sentence to deal with cases like Swanbeck's.

He described the crime as "more an offence of carelessness rather than dishonesty."

As a result of the charges, Swanbeck's activities have been confined and "he, of course, will be discharged from the post office" which is punishment in itself, said Turnham.

He asked Drake to consider a suspended sentence or fine.

Prosecutor Brian Smith said "Parliament historically regards this as a very serious offence" carrying a maximum penalty of 10 years.

Having said that, Smith agreed with Turnham's suggestion. Drake said the offence appeared to be "entirely out of character" and there was no need to impose any deterrent for other postmen.

He granted the discharge, looked at the accused and said "Mr. Swanbeck, you are free to leave."

Outside court, Swanbeck jokingly poked a newspaper reporter on the shoulder and said "the fist is greater than the pen."

Whiz-Bang of a Straw Fight May End Future Mall Dances

It was a "whiz-bang of a straw fight . . . like being in the middle of a mid-summer blizzard. It was fascinating."

But that straw fight and a minor incidence of bottle throwing which happened at the same time may have scuttled further Broad Street Mall dances during next year's Victorian Days.

Mall co-ordinator Cliff Clarke said today the event was a success, but the "results, unfortunately, were not too beneficial to Victorian Days, so I doubt that it will be held again."

Clarke said younger patrons stayed on after the dance closed shortly after 11 p.m. They dispersed about 2 a.m.

Clarke said there was no damage to stores, parked cars or sound equipment.

"It was something for the kids and highly successful. But I personally wouldn't recommend another in a confined area. You need a huge, open area."

He credited police with much of the success. Plainclothesmen stayed mainly in the background during the event.

Among the events which took place were appearances by more than 10 bands, eight choral groups, two barbershop quartets, two dance revues, a kiddies' costume parade, the Canadian Scottish Regiment (Princess Mary's) pipe band, the drums and bugles of Artillery Cadets and several itinerant youth groups.

A live show took place every noon at one or more of three stages and some organized entertainment was scheduled every half-hour on Saturday from 10 a.m.

Despite criticism of the mall, Clarke thought it met expectations even though the organizers had "no experience and no funds. That's quite a combination, but it worked."

Merchants who were critical appear to be in the minority, Clarke said.

To the charge that the mall was shoddy, Clarke said the things used were provided free — for example, the construction company barricades.

Booths had to be constructed by the operators using their own limited resources and doing their best, he said.

OAK BAY SEEKS DISCOVERY CLEANUP

Oak Bay will write to the provincial parks department urging cleanup and more control of vandalism on Discovery Island, donated as a provincial park by the late Capt. E. G. Beaumont.

Ald. Brian Smith told council Monday he was appalled to read in the Times that Beaumont's old home on the island had been ransacked and damaged.

He was also concerned about the personal papers which vandals had strewn over the floors.

The council will also write the Provincial Archives to ask that Beaumont's letters and other personal effects be saved.

Council Orders Probe On Apartment Switch

Oak Bay municipal solicitor D. M. Gordon was instructed by Oak Bay council Monday to investigate whether the owner of Hampshire House has applied to the Land Registry Office to change the building from an apartment to a condominium.

Council will also invite submissions from Hampshire House tenants on the proposed change-over.

Richard Field, who rents one of the apartments, at 1159 Beach Drive said Hampshire House owner had sold out to a man from Utah. He said the price of the apartments would be $40,000.

"He sounded out many of the residents," Field said, "on whether they are prepared to purchase. We're violently opposed to providing a huge profit to an American developer."

Field estimated the profit would be $500,000 to $600,000.

"We are paying rather fabulous rents and are quite content to do so," he added, "but we are not prepared to pay that kind of price for a six-year-old building."

Penny Parking on Way Out

City traffic engineer Dave Campbell said today there will probably be a recommendation to council to eliminate use of pennies in 1974.

"It means purchasing new meters and modifying the ones we've got," he said.

Reason for the change is because of labor costs involved in collecting and sorting the coins.

Campbell said that six million of the eight million coins deposited in meters last year were pennies.

Nurses Get 10% Hike

Registered nurses and psychiatric nurses employed in government institutions will receive the 10-per-cent civil servant salary increases recently negotiated by the British Columbia Government Employees Union.

Provincial Secretary Ernie Hall announced Monday the salary increase has been extended to cover the 1,800 nurses.

Both groups have agreed to the new scale which is retroactive to April 1 and means nurses earning less than $750 a month will get an across-the-board increase of $75. Those earning more will get a 10-per-cent hike.

Nurses with added responsibilities on night shift will get an extra $15 a month, up from $5.

Fire Dousing a 'Pit-y'

What a bloomin- pit-y!

This was the reaction of Alds. Norman Pimlott and John Goult Monday night when Oak Bay council voted to have cement pits for beach fires built on Willows Beach. Fires on the sand will be banned.

"I think it will be a pit-y," Pimlott said after the vote went against him and Goult.

Both he and Goult said it was wrong to take away the freedom of people to build fires on the beach. Both said they wore scars from burns they had received from beach fires in their youth but felt they were well worth it.

"We like to regulate everything," Goult said, "we don't like anything that may bother us. There's a great deal to be said for beach fires. We're getting a little bit Big Brother about this."

The move to ban beach fires and build six cement pits for fires instead came after police chief John Green asked for a ban on beach fires.

Green said 89 permits had been issued since April 1, 84 for Willows Beach. He said the police force's work load didn't allow time for each fire to be checked.

Green said that since April 24 one small boy had burnt his hand in the embers of a fire, the fire department had been called out twice to douse smoldering logs, one call being after midnight.

In addition, early one morning youths set fire to garbage cans in the area and left the fire unattended.

He said that some residents had received serious injuries from broken glass and hot embers and had to be taken to hospital.

"This becomes time consuming for both police and fire departments," he said.

Savings Account Rates Hint 10 Per Cent Mortgages Near

By AL FORREST
Times Business Editor

Some Victoria trust companies are offering eight per cent interest on five-year-term savings, indicating a 10 per cent interest rate for first mortgages might be very near.

The trust companies traditionally have needed a margin of two per cent between the rate at which they borrow from the public and the rate they lend money in mortgages.

The conventional mortgage rate in Victoria is 9.25 per cent.

In Ontario the rate is quoted as 9.25 per cent to 9.5 per cent.

The Toronto firm of A. E. LePage Ltd. reports many borrowers are seeking mortgages, expecting the interest rate to go up again soon.

As a result there is a significant decline in the amount of funds available.

Generally funds are adequate but not in great surplus as they were earlier this year.

Gradual upward movement in the interest rate is anticipated with 9.25 to 9.5 in the near term and 9.5 to 9.75 or 10 per cent towards year's end.

Mortgage rates hit a peak of 10.5 per cent three years ago but have been below 10 since that time. Lowest point was 8.75 per cent in 1972.

Meanwhile, the popularity of 95 per cent mortgages has been called a major factor in soaring prices for real estate.

Homes in some areas in Toronto and Vancouver have gone up 15 per cent to 25 per cent in the past six months. Victoria values have gone up between 10 per cent to 15 per cent in prime locations.

The soaring prices has caused the Mortgage Insurance Company of Canada to revise its policy on 95 per cent mortgages.

Now the company will lend money on 95 per cent of the apraised value only to $30,000. Previously the company would lend at the rate of 95 per cent of the value of the house up to $40,000.

Above $30,000 a house can be mortgaged 75 per cent by the company up to an appraised value of $50,000. Above that level the mortgage limit would be 50 per cent.

The effect of the new policy reduces speculation in higher priced houses because a larger down payment is required.

Some speculators were buying with 95 per cent mortgages and reselling immediately at inflated prices.

Mortgage Insurance Company is the oldest of the companies offering 95 per cent mortgages.

A new firm, Insmor Mortgage Insurance Company, formed by 11 financial institutions, has not changed its lending rules but is taking a careful look at mortgage applications on houses priced above $40,000 by looking for a sizeable down payment.

Approved lenders making loans insured under the National Housing Act can lend up to 95 per cent of the value up to a total loan of $30,000 for new houses and up to $23,000 for existing homes.

Any reduction in the availability of high first mortgages could be expected to increase the demand for second mortgage money.

Interest rate for second mortgages has been holding firm in the 11 per cent to 12 per cent range but continued upward pressure on first mortgage rates would have a spillover effect upon second mortgages.

business

Atlantic Sugar

Shareholders of Atlantic Sugar Refineries Co. Ltd. approved at the company's annual meeting the proposed amalgamation of the Glengair Group Ltd. of Toronto and Atlantic Sugar.

The amalgamated company is to be called Jannock Corp. Ltd. and is to be in Toronto.

The shareholders approved the terms of the proposed share-exchange arrangements.

Common shares of Atlantic will be converted into common shares of Jannock on a one-for-one basis.

Glengair currently owns 62 per cent of Atlantic Sugar.

W. J. R. Paton, president of Atlantic Sugar, will be chairman of Jannock and J. Howard Hawks, chairman and president of Glengair, will be president of the new company.

Glengair is a fully-diversified corporation active in construction materials, electrical and other products.

Westburne

Westburne International Industries Ltd. earned $4,808,000 or $1.35 a common share last year compared with $3,118,000 or 85 cents a share in 1971.

Gross revenue rose to $177,386,000.

Westurne is a diversified company with interests in petroleum production and exploration and plumbing, heating and electrical equipment supply.

Toronto Dominion

Toronto Dominion Bank reports a nine-per-cent increase in balance of revenue for the six months ended April 30, to $42,699,000 from $39,260,000 in the corresponding period last year.

Chairman Allen Lambert says recent changes in the interest rate structure on domestic loans and deposits are not likely to affect earnings materially in the second half.

Total assets of the bank at April 30 were $8.6 million, up 22 per cent over the figure at the same time in 1972.

Provision for income tax was $20.3 million compared with $18.5 million.

$ EXCHANGE

ENVIRONMENT AND LAND USE COMMITTEE SECRETARIAT
VICTORIA

The Environment and Land Use Committee is comprised of the Ministers of Lands, Forests and Water Resources, Mines and Petroleum Resources, Agriculture, Municipal Affairs, Health, Highways, and Recreation and Conservation. The Committee is responsible for broad environmental and land use policy, and will be undertaking major land and resource allocation studies throughout the Province on an inter-Departmental basis and with Regional District and Municipal participation.

The Secretariat now being formed will provide interdisciplinary technical assistance to the Committee in examining problems, developing viable alternatives, documenting the consequences of those alternatives, and recommending courses of action. It will consist of three units. The regional planning unit will focus on broad land allocation and resources management for recreation, fish and wildlife, water resources, development. The special projects unit will tackle specific problems of inter-Departmental importance, such as shoreline and lakeshore development, recreation homes, ski area policy, harbour strategy, broad transportation and settlement patterns, major utility corridors, and the like. The inventory unit will work on land capability analysis and backup technical information for use in land management.

In undertaking its job, the Secretariat staff will work primarily to draw together appropriate resource people from the various Departments and Regional Districts into special task groups, drawing upon the capability and knowledge that already exists in the Departments, both in Victoria and in the field. The Secretariat staff will also work closely with the Land Commission appointed under the Land Commission Act.

DIRECTOR. Salary (tentative) — $33,000

This position is equal in scope, responsibility and salary to that of a Deputy Minister. The incumbent will be responsible for the overall administration of the Secretariat, assisting the Environment and Land Use Committee and carrying out its instructions; maintaining liaison with Deputy Ministers, and chairing hearings on matters that come before the Committee; developing realistic optimum policy options; documentations of consequences of alternate courses of action, and advancement of recommendations for consideration by the Committee.

The Director must be progressive, innovative and capable of drawing together and developing teamwork and individual potential from a diverse range of people. The incumbent should have, preferably, a post-graduate degree and wide experience in the field of land allocation and resource management.

Ruling May 'Depend On Dinner'

Council Monday in a public hearing approved the construction of a second house on 7.7 acres of land at the end of Scarborough despite a standing five-acre minimum on subdivision.

Aldermen said they were satisfied the application by R. L. Christison, 4538 Scarborough, was not an attempt to overcome the five-acre minimum rule.

But Ald. William Campbell opposed the bid, arguing there had been many such applications refused in the past, one where 9.9 acres was involved.

Mayor Curtis, acknowledging the long-standing rule against two dwellings on one parcel of land, admitted there has been inconsistency in council decisions. "It partly depends on what we've had for dinner."

The Christison family is operating a poultry business and in order to accommodate another member of the family wishing to enter the business, another dwelling was necessary.

Mrs. Christison said her son was to be the occupant and eventually will take over the business.

Approval also was granted an application to change single family zoning to duplex zoning for one lot immediately west of 742 Ralph Street, four lots east of Douglas, and for a duplex on 13,000 square feet of panhandle at the east of Cranbrook Place off Doncaster.

In the latter case, final reading of the rezoning bylaw will depend on the incorporation of design changes by owner Terry Smith to provide a carport and mitigate the overpowering aspect of the east wall and roofline.

At a special meeting of council immediately following the hearing, final reading was given a bylaw granting shopping centre zoning for jointly-owned property on Gorge between Tillicum and Albina.

About $1.5 million will be spent to make the site into a neighborhood shopping centre.

KIDS JUST DIG cave-digging . . . and that's the hole problem for city park crews who are kept busy filling in and repairing erosion damage caused by youthful excavators on the steep, sandy bank at Clover Point. Parks director Cliff Bate says the caves are usually dug during winter months when the sand is moist and firm but become a hazard at this time of year when the sand dries. The waterfront bank between Cook Street and Moss is so hole-riddled it's becoming a serious erosion problem, he says.

$100,000 OVERHAUL

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (AP) — The United States government has spent more than $100,000 for improvements at President Nixon's San Clemente estate since he bought it four years ago, records show.

Most of the work was done in the name of presidential security.

Much of it, however, has enhanced the value of the oceanside property owned by Nixon and one of his wealthy friends, New York industrialist Robert Abplanalp.

The federal investment of more than $100,000 was disclosed in city building-permit records and in subsequent interviews with government officials. The figure is nearly three times the $39,525 which the White House said during the weekend the government had spent for improvements to the estate.

These improvements are in addition to the $123,514 which the White House said last week the Nixons have spent for improvements to their house and homesite.

When asked about the expenditures, the White House said Monday:

"All of the work done at the Western White House as listed in the AP story was requested by the Secret Service for the protection of the president. If the Associated Press has a recommendation to make to the Secret Service as to how the president and his family should be protected, the AP should outline those suggestions at the same time that it carries a story which implies that the president has improved his property at the expense of the government."

Employment Act Aired

Labor Minister Bill King met Monday with a group of independent contractors from the Kootenay region of the province to discuss the effects of the controversial Public Works Fair Employment Act, which allows only unionized labor to work on government contracts.

King said after the meeting that the contractors' main objection was that the act may be enforced too stringently against them, especially the small operators who do not use union labor.

The minister said he clarified exemptions under the act, which he said apply to municipal and school construction projects.

King said he hopes there will be sufficient differentiation made between the large contractors and smaller operators in terms of labor agreements.

A spokesman for the contractors, Elmer Verigin of Trail, said the group represents between 50 and 60 contractors in the East and West Kootenays.

Verigin said King told the group he would think about their complaints and that the group will meet later to discuss the meeting.

Verigin said government should not interfere with an individual's choice to work where he pleases.

Blunder Threatens Festival

A $7,500 blunder by Greater Victoria intermunicipal committee has placed Victoria Summer Festival in jeopardy, Saanich council was told Monday.

Aldermen generally approved of increasing the Saanich share of a $15,000 intermunicipal grant from $2,915 to $5,830, but referred the matter to finance committee for more detailed exploration with power to act.

Ald. Edith Gunning said the festival is "an excellent thing for our city and good to give the symphony work. It is good for tourists and the people who live here."

The summer festival is designed to give the symphony and musicians greater exposure during the holidays with concerts in Bastion and Centennial squares and at the Provincial Museum.

The intermunicipal goof had caused Victoria to refer its share of the grant back to the committee for clarification. Oak Bay and Victoria approved the initial request as had Saanich, but Esquimalt opted out.

Restrict Oil Exports, NDP Urges

OTTAWA (CP) — The New Democratic Party proposed a three-point plan Monday, including export restrictions on gasoline and refined oil products, to avert repercusions in this country from the United States energy crisis.

Crude - oil export restrictions already have been announced by the government but the U.S. is bypassing their effect by dramatically increasing gasoline imports from Canada, the Commons was told by T. C. Douglas (NDP — Nanaimo - Cowichan-The Islands).

He also called for a two-price oil and gas system to protect Canadian consumers and urged the government to abolish the Ottawa Valley line which separates Canada into two energy markets.

Energy Minister Donald Macdonald, in reply, repeated previous assurances that domestic gasoline supplies are not threatened by heavy U.S. demand. But he declined to commit himself on a two-price system or the possibility of removing the Ottawa Valley line.

If necessary, the minister said, the government will act quickly to protect Canadian gasoline supplies but no real shortage now exists.

He said if the petroleum industry cannot meet domestic requirements, the government will not hesitate to impose export controls.

He agreed that gasoline exports have risen substantially but said the volume amounts to only two per cent of Canadian production.

Outside the House, he said a two-price system would give Canadians a lower cost than they might otherwise expect but it would be complicated to set up and would mean lower returns for Western producers.

He also reacted skeptically to the proposed altering of the Ottawa Valley line under which Canadian oil supplies all territory west of that boundary and imported oil for territory to the east.

Douglas said removal of the line would produce competition by allowing both foreign and domestic suppliers to compete for the Canadian market as a whole.

In urging tighter restrictions the former NDP leader said the crude oil export quotas imposed by the government in February already have proven their worth.

May export applications totalled 200,000 barrels a day more than the National Energy Board could allow under the restrictions while the figure for June would be 350,000 beyond the limit.

But the alarming aspect is that the U.S. has evaded the effect of the restrictions by buying vastly increased quantities of Canadian gasoline, Douglas said.

The result were already starting to show. British Petroleum had notified Capital City Gas, an independent Ottawa gasoline dealer, that it will cut off supplies from all but two of the company's 24 service stations after June 1.

As a result, he said, Capital City has decided to close all 24 stations, leaving about 200 employees without work.

Douglas said gasoline exports for March alone totalled 12.4 million gallons, including 5.3 million to the United States. This compared with 17 million gallons exported in all of 1972, of which 16.6 million were to the U.S.

In Toronto, Donald MacDonald (NDP—Toronto York South) told the legislature Monday that some independent retailers have been told by gasoline companies that gas supplies cannot be guaranteed beyond June 1 or July 1.

The New Democratic Party financial critic charged that gasoline manufactured in Canada would be going to the export market, possibly as an alternative to selling it here.

He asked whether the government has any jurisdiction over pricing or refusal to supply Canadian retailers.

TALKS CALLED A WASHOUT

OTTAWA (CP) — The three-day federal-provincial conference last week made "considerable progress towards harmonizing" federal and provincial government objectives, Prime Minister Trudeau told the Commons Monday.

There emerged a better mutual understanding of goals that would benefit all, he said.

But opposition spokesmen said they saw the conference as a virtual washout that achieved next to nothing and which leaves all major problems unsolved.

Progressive Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield said he doubts "if any conference for a good many years . . . achieved so little in concrete results."

The major agreements reached were predictable.

These included provincial acceptance of higher family allowances and the federal offer for greater provincial flexibility in health-care programs.

Stanfield said the conference gave no indication that the government will produce a more effective regional development program or find agreement among the provinces on financing health costs.

T. C. Douglas (NDP—Uanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands) described it as "another ho-hum conference" and blamed the outcome on the quality of federal leadership.

He was glad the provinces refused to let Ottawa abandon responsibility for health care and post-secondary education.

U.S. Drives Oil Up—Lewis

SUDBURY, Ont. (CP) — Canadians, while understanding the need to regain economic control of their own country, "are unfortunately already paying part of the price of foreign domination," New Democrat Leader David Lewis said Monday night.

"We are being faced this year with price increases for our energy needs like those we experienced in food," he told a party rally.

"We are going to pay more for home fuel, for lighting and for gasoline for our cars."

Lewis said prices are not going up because of any shortage within Canada.

"There is still plenty of oil and gas in the ground to meet our needs and more but the Americans are running short. They are willing to pay higher prices for energy and the international oil companies that control our wells will sell at the highest possible price."

The only solution was to match U.S. prices and this was why prices in Canada were going up.

Lewis tossed the blame at the Liberals and Conservatives, saying a good example of government attitude is the Liberals' insistence on construction of a Mackenzie Valley pipeline.

He said there will be between 5,000 and 6,000 short-term construction jobs and only 150 to 200 permanent ones, "hardly enough to populate a tiny village."

He said financing the pipeline could force interest rates even higher, push up the premium on the Canadian dollar and thus damage our export position and result in lost jobs.

Lewis lambasted Imperial Oil as being in the forefront of "the mad rush to suck Canadians dry . . ."

He said Imperial has made more than $1 billion in profits in the last 10 years. Last year's profit had been $151 million, an 11-per-cent increase over 1971's $136 million.

"By the end of last year, Imperial Oil had used various tax loopholes provided by their Liberal and Tory friends to duck $170 million in income taxes.

"These unpaid taxes have had to be made up by higher income taxes for ordinary Canadians and other businessmen without such generous dodges."

U.K. SCANDAL DYING DOWN

LONDON (Reuter) — Britain's sex scandal appeared to be subsiding today as the government dismissed allegations that more ministers may have been involved in a vice ring.

A statement issued from the office of Prime Minister Edward Heath Monday night said police investigations had produced no evidence to support suggestions that two further members of the government had had liaisons with prostitutes.

Two ministers, Lord Lambton, in charge of the Royal Air Force, and Lord Jellicoe leader of the ruling Conservative party in the House of Lords, resigned last week after admitting associating with call girls.

Mr. D. Steele
Manager
The Royal Bank of Canada
Kelowna, B.C.

Dear Mr. Steele:

As you know independent businessmen play a highly important role in the economy of our Province. This bank has always recognized and supported the activities of the independent businessman but I think now is an appropriate time to re-emphasize it -- and there are good reasons.

First, the need is there. There is a real need for vigorous growth in this section of the economy and financing is one of the necessary ingredients. Second, this provides an opportunity for solid expansion of our own operations.

Therefore, I would like to reiterate what has been said before -- that our policy is to give special consideration to applications for loans from smaller, independent businessmen. To make this happen I am asking you to bring your maximum energy and imagination to bear in developing such applications within the framework of sound banking principles. If we are able to help independent businessmen, then in the long run we will be helping ourselves and our country.

Yours sincerely,

G. B. Langley

Indy Crash Brings Demand for Roll Cages

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — "How much longer are we going to let this go on?" fumed Gary Bettenhausen, staring at the wreckage of David Salt Walther's 77 McLaren - Offy in Speedway's Gasoline Alley.

"We'll keep on having serious injuries and deaths until we put roll cages on these cars. I've been fighting for them for a long time. The drivers are 90 per cent in favor of them. Still nothing is done.

"Look how many deaths we've had from cars that land upside down. I'm one of the few guys to walk away from such a wreck. But the guys are just too proud or something to go for the cages."

The 25-year-old Walther was the chief casualty in a nine-car accident Monday on the first lap of the rain-delayed Indianapolis 500.

His car hit the outside wall, severed two support poles, flipped over, spun and burst into flames before the startled eyes of spectators in the main grandstand.

He was reported in stable but serious condition from burns to 40 per cent of his body and a broken left wrist.

Two other drivers were treated and released, and eight spectators, hit by flying parts, also were taken to hospital.

An hour after the flaming crash, after most of the 350,000 spectators had begun streaming out to await today's second try at the race, Walther's garage on the north end of the alley was grim.

Bettenhausen, whose father had crashed and died on the old brick and concrete oval, and Walther's chief mechanic, Tom Smith, examined the wreckage as other members of the team and pit crew, including one of Salt's six brothers, Jeff, stood by in silence.

"I got a good look at it," said Smith. "It was a tight squeeze going down that straightaway and I think he was bumped."

"Looks like his right rear tire blew," said Bettenhausen. "There were some skid marks and they looked like they got heavier."

Bettenhausen had dropped in out of interest both in the man and in the car. If he could find out what happened to the car during the crash he might save the lives of other drivers. The need for roll cages dominated his analysis.

"They are compulsory now on sprint cars and midget cars, every kind of car except these," Bettenhausen said. "I remember one year six men were killed in sprint races when their cars turned over. Since the cages were installed, I know of only two."

Bettenhausen had his car turn eight flips before landing upside down in 1969 at Milwaukee.

"I was just lucky. Later I told one of the drivers that we should have protective cages, and he just laughed at me. I felt like knocking his teeth in."

Jeff Walther said he talked to his brother, and "he said his back hurt like hell."

Walther is a driver who has had to live down the "rich kid" label. He is one of six children of George Walther, president of Dayton-Walther and sponsor of race cars.

The handsome, long-haired Salt raced outboards at 12, moved up to hydroplanes and started racing sprint cars in 1968.

"Ever since I can remember, all I've wanted to do is race my cars and boats and run fast," he said recently.

He was the most impatient and restless of drivers Monday when intermittent rain kept holding off the start of the big race.

"I haven't eaten for two days," he said. "You get all psyched up for a race like this and look what happens—rain. It drains you of everything you've got."

Hockey: A Tempting Offer To Go 'Outlaw'

The big story today, of course, is the emergency meeting of the Western Canada Junior Hockey League in Saskatoon.

The 12 member clubs will be asked simply if they wish to transfer their allegiance to the World Hockey Association or remain with the National Hockey League.

The carrot, insofar as the WCHL is concerned, is money; for the WHA, it's a bid to have a farm-club complex for the players not good enough to play on the big teams.

Details are sketchy, but the basic plan appears to be that the WHA is prepared to offer WCHL clubs the sum of $60,000 each to go along with the idea.

This would include an arrangement whereby four to six over-age players (20 and 21 year olds) would be allowed to play for the WCHL teams, their salaries, naturally, to be paid by the WHA teams.

Obviously this might necessitate the WCHL going "outlaw" and playing outside the jurisdiction of the CAHA. It is doubtful if any over-age players would be permitted under any agreement with the CAHA because it would conflict with agreements with other junior leagues.

In return for such an arrangement the WHA is reportedly prepared to allow all junior players on the teams to remain eligible for the draft, either by the WHA or the NHL. There would be no strings attached.

Wanted: A Farm System

The reasoning is simple enough, and makes a lot of sense from a WHA viewpoint. The WHA needs farm teams. It hasn't any, and it hasn't any place to put its players who aren't quite good enough to perform in the major league. And if it can't barge into one of the established minor professional systems controlled by the NHL, then it must find another way of providing a system of farm teams, more especially for players one or two years beyond the graduation age of 19. Otherwise they may be lost, perhaps to the NHL.

As it is now, the CAHA agreement with the NHL, in essence, calls for development money totalling $10,000 to be paid to each club in the WCHL, with other monies to be paid on a sliding scale for players who are drafted and then not signed by NHL teams. There is a report this agreement is about to be changed, but for better or worse, nobody knows. Still the possibility of payments reaching the new plateau of $60,000 is chancy indeed, thus the emergency.

Actually, the WHA offer of a $60,000 flat payment per team is much like the original club sponsorship system but with some basic differences and many questions.

For instance, if draftable junior players are not bound to the WHA upon completion of their junior years, what happens to a junior who doesn't make the team? Will he be accepted by the CAHA? Will a player be allowed to transfer willy-nilly from a CAHA-controlled league to the WCHL and back? Will another agreement have to be worked out in this regard? From a CAHA viewpoint it doesn't seem likely. Not under the present rules.

A Stick To Bargain With

Still, for the WCHL clubs, the offer is a tempting one; and even if a final decision isn't arrived at in Saskatoon, certainly the proposition, whatever it is in its final form, will give the WCHL a big bargaining stick in any dealings leading to a lasting conclusion with the WHA or the CAHA. Or both.

It could be interesting, or perhaps a merger of the WHA and the NHL is closer than people are prepared to think.

Meanwhile, for those who missed the B.C. darts championship tournament at Britannia on the weekend, you also missed seeing some members of "Team Canada" in action. How about that? It's true.

A few weeks ago, some members of the Victoria Darts Association were invited to an eight-game series in Seattle, and the red carpet was rolled out for their appearance.

A dart board was pictured on the front page, no less, of the Seattle Times, with a full-length feature inside. Everybody stood at attention of the playing of God Bless America and O Canada; even the Washington State Liquor Board relented and allowed weapons (a dart is a pointed spear) and liquor on the same premises; and yes, the label read: "Team Canada". Naturally, the Victorians upheld their honor well, and trimmed the Americans, seven matches to one. But hark! The Yankees want revenge, and the rematch will be accommodated at Britannia on June 9. Don't miss it.

STOCKHOLM (Reuter) — Sweden will not take part in the 1976 Winter Olympics hockey tournament in Innesbruck, Austria, the Swedish Ice Hockey Association has decided.

Helge Berglund, president of the Swedish association, said the Olympic committee, in defining the amateur status of teams, had set an earnings limit. All top players in Sweden likely to be selected were earning more than that limit, Berglund said.

Stig Nillson, secretary-general of the association, said the association would instead campaign for an open world championship in ice hockey.

Officials thought Finland likely would follow Sweden's lead in withdrawing from the Olympics over the professionalism issue.

Canada withdrew from Olympic and world hockey competition in 1970 and has been campaigning unsuccessfully for open competition.

Hamilton's Heroics Rescue McDonalds

Victoria McDonalds pulled back into a first-place tie in the Pacific Junior "A" Lacrosse League Monday night but they needed some great third-period goaltending by John Hamilton to do it.

After winning their first three league games with ease—including a 14-2 decision over Burnaby Cablevision—McDonalds were pushed hard by Burnaby at Memorial Arena before grabbing a 12-10 decision.

Hamilton, who made 41 saves, was particularly alert in the third period when Burnaby made an all-out effort to come from behind for a win.

The hustling visitors looked like they might just do it too when they took advantage of a major penalty to Norm Baker early in the final period to score three power play goals and cut Victoria's lead to 11-8.

It seemed only a matter of time before Cablevision would snatch the lead when the squad scored again midway through the period to make it 11-9.

But that's when Hamilton showed his class and withstood the late Burnaby barrage to preserve the victory.

McDonalds, who have a game in hand, are now tied for the lead with Coquitlam J-Hawks but that deadlock will only last until Wednesday night when Victoria visits Coquitlam.

Burnaby stayed alone in third place after the league defending champions, Richmond Roadrunners, lost their fourth straight game Monday night in Surrey.

Jerry Kustaski had a six-point night, three goals and three assists, to lead McDonalds and Mike Yeager scored twice. The other Victoria goals were scored by Jim Lynch, Lorry Gloeckner, Glen Neuman, Jamie Robertson, Kim Bowles, Danny Green and Baker.

Burnaby got three goals each from Wayne Sutherland and Nick Delmonico. Mike Holden scored twice and the remaining Burnaby goals were scored by Gordy McNeil and Mike McLenaghen.

Brian Hazelwood scored four goals and added three assists and Pete Guerin got four goals as the basement-dwelling Salmonbellies scored their first win of the season, a 15-13 decision over Richmond.

Thompson's Six-Pack Not Enough for Irish

COQUITLAM—Ivan Thompson scored six times here Monday night to become the season's leading goal-getter in the Western Lacrosse Association—but even that couldn't save Victoria Shamrocks.

Shamrocks, who defeated Coquitlam Adanacs 15-12 and then upset defending champion New Westminster Salmonbellies 13-8 in their two Victoria games, kept the record of home-team domination straight by crashing to their fourth defeat on the road.

Adanacs, helped by their opponents' sloppy passing and weak defence, won easily 21-11 to take over first place.

It was the 11th victory in a row by a home team this season. Salmonbellies get a chance to break this run when they visit Vancouver Burrards tonight and, if they don't, Shamrocks will be out to preserve the home-team win streak when they play host to Adanacs Wednesday night.

Ivan Thompson's six goals gave him a total of 16, three more than Jim Rickbeil of the Adanacs, who moved into second place among goal-getters with four tallies Monday night. Previous leading goal-scorer, Jim Grady of Coquitlam, was held scoreless Monday. He has 12 goals.

Hotelmen Boost Baseball Lead

Gorge Hotel extended its first-place lead to 1½ games Monday by tripping runner-up Al's Home Service 5-3 in a Victoria Senior Baseball League game at Lambrick Park.

George Fuller scored what proved to be the winning run in the third inning by singling, advancing on singles by Wayne O'Malley and Terry Tweedy and coming home on another single by Rick Cook.

Fuller finished up with two hits in three trips to the plate and drove in one run.

Tom Craig led Al's batters with a three-for-four performance and scored once.

Nordiques Lure Hoganson; Other Attempts Hit Snags

QUEBEC (CP) — Quebec Les Nordiques have lured defenceman Dale Hoganson to the World Hockey Assocation but are having trouble getting other National Hockey League players to join the team.

Hoganson, who spent most of the 1972-73 season sitting in the stands watching his Montreal Canadiens' teammates perform, signed with Les Nordiques. The club did not announce the legnth of the deal.

It was also announced at a news conference Monday that Jean-Claude Tremblay, another former Canadien defenceman, had been named a playing assistant coach. Tremblay was captain of Les Nordiques last season.

Hoganson, 23-year-old native of North Battleford, played 26 games for Montreal this year and had two assists.

Hoganson was the top draft pick of Los Angeles Kings in the 1969 NHL amateur draft and played with the Kings and their American Hockey League affiliate at Springfield before being dealt to Montreal along with goaltender Denis DeJordy, forward Doug Robinson and defenceman Noel Price in exchange for goalkeeper Rogatien Vachon.

Jacques Plante, general manager and coach of Les Nordiques, was happy about the signing of the defenceman but at the same time had a less optimistic report on other attempts to sign players.

Without announcing any names, Plante said Les Nordiques are dickering with seven NHL players at the present time. There were reports during the weekend that Les Nordiques had signed defenceman Bob Murdoch and forward Rejean Houle, both members of the Stanley Cup champion Canadiens.

Plante noted that difficulties lay in getting past the prestige of the NHL and in putting up salary guarantees.

Plante said NHL players, even if they agreed to drop the prestige of playing in the NHL, are asking for two-and three-year contracts. They also want guarantees.

If a team had a $1 million player payroll, that meant they had to put up $3 million in guarantees to get players to sign.

"If the NHL had to do the same thing, they would have a lot of problems signing a lot of their guys too, because they couldn't afford to sign them to those kind of contracts."

Snaith Too Young To Meet U.S. Foe

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (CP) — Age prevented Jack Snaith of Nanaimo from competing Monday night in the annual meeting of Canadian and American boxing champions.

Snaith is Canadian light-flyweight champion but was unable to compete because he is only 16, a year under the age required by tournament rules.

But for the fourth straight year, the United States took the team championship, winning six matches to three.

OWNERS MUST VOTE

SAN DIEGO (AP) — National League President Chub Feeney Monday called the San Diego Padres' move to Washington "strictly a conditional situation."

"It's conditional upon the financing, on the San Diego lease situation and obviously on a league vote," said Feeney.

The National League chief added: "There is no league meeting scheduled yet, but the owners have been notified about the situation."

Feeney said that 10 days' notice must be given for such a meeting and nine votes are needed to carry the new owners. The 12 National League teams vote on the move.

Moore Might Retire

LONDON (AP) — Bobby Moore's long reign as captain of England may be drawing to a close as the team prepares for the big push into the final stage of the 1974 World Cup.

After 11 years and 104 appearances for his country, Moore had been considered almost indispensable. England's World Cup triumph in 1966 was largely based on a defence centred on Moore.

But Moore, 32, made a little-publicized admission in a newspaper published in the area around his West Ham club's ground in east London. He said he is seriously considering following the example of former England colleagues Jack and Bobby Charlton and retiring while he is still at the top.

Moore indicated that he might quit at the end of next season, which would in theory still leave him eligible for the 1974 World Cup.

But for Moore even to admit he is considering retiring may mean that he agrees with some experts who say he has not been showing his old speed and skill in his last few appearances for Englaand.

PLAYERS GIVE APPROVAL TO NHL-RUSSIA SERIES

FREEPORT, The Bahamas (CP) — The National Hockey League Players Association announced today that it has approved the NHL-Russia series to be played later this year.

"Every team was represented at our association annual meeting," said Alan Eagleson, executive director of the association, following a session in this resort in the Bahamas.

Some players had reservations about the series, but the principle of the series was accepted."

"We will recommend that some changes be made in the proposed schedule of these games," Eagleson added.

"A committee will be set up to discuss the reserve clause. We expect to meet again with the owners to discuss changes in the reserve clause which will be acceptable to players and owners."

"We are concerned about player injuries because of the stationary goal net," said Ken Dryden, Montreal Canadiens goalie.

Claude Larose of Montreal and Luc Grenier of Atlanta suffered broken legs which might have been avoided with a "European style net," Dryden said.

WILBUR WOOD
. . . two in one night

Wilbur The Wonderful Wins Two More for Sox

By The Associated Press

Wilbur Wood pitched a six-hitter Monday night. And he did it in two games, not one.

Wilbur Wonderful added a pair of victories to his imposing total with his latest work of art, 6-3 and 4-0 Chicago victories over the befuddled Cleveland Indians.

The White Sox Left Arm went five innings in the first game, continuation of a 16-inning suspended affair from Saturday night, and gave up two hits and one unearned run. He fired a four-hitter in the regulation game to bring his record to 13-3, the best by far in the majors.

His 13 victories are half the White Sox total.

"I've won two in one day before and I've lost two a couple of times," said Wood, grinning. "But I guess I never did it this way."

DIDN'T WORK HARD

Wood, who usually pitches with two days rest, didn't find the extra work especially taxing.

"I got away with a limited number of pitches. They were hitting away on the first and second pitches much of the time."

Wood is nearly a month ahead of Denny McLain's pace in 1968, when he won 31 games with Detroit Tigers. McLain didn't win his 13th that year until June 24.

In the other American League games, Minnesota Twins defeated Baltimore Orioles 10-3; California Angels beat Milwaukee Brewers 7-4; Detroit Tigers nipped Oakland A's 4-3 and Kansas City Royals turned back Boston Red Sox 5-4.

Wood appeared on his way to losing Monday night's first game when he gave up an unearned run in the top of the 21st. However, his mates quickly settled things in the bottom half of the inning. Eddie Leon's single brought in the tying run and then Dick Allen later came through with a three-run homer to win it.

In the regulation game he yielded hits in the first three innings, and then only a bunt single by Walt Williams in the seventh.

The White Sox gave Wood all the runs he needed with a two-run first inning as Bill Melton doubled home a run and then scored on a single by Rick Reichardt.

In the National League, Andy Messersmith set a modern National League record for strikeouts at the start of a game, but didn't look that good doing it as catcher Joe Ferguson refused to co-operate.

Messersmith struck out the first six Philadelphia batters in order but Greg Luzinzki reached first when the third strike got away from Ferguson. Bob Boone broke the string with an outfield fly.

Dodgers defeated the Phillies 5-1. In other games San Francisco defeated New York Mets 6-5, Cincinnati Reds edged Chicago Cubs 6-5, Pittsburgh Pirates defeated Houston Astros 4-2, St. Louis Cardinals edged Atlanta Braves 3-2, and Montreal Expos beat San Diego 7-6.

Speaking of Simon-Pures, Jake's Going to England

No one came closer to scoring a hole-in-one on Cedar Hill's 10th than Dave Mick, and it was a near-miss that brought out the purity of a good amateur.

"No . . . no . . ." Mick yelled aloud, "don't go in."

The ball hit the flagstick on the 10th green, spun out and finished a few inches away from the cup. Had it gone in, Mick would have been eligible to claim, if he desired, a new auto, one of the premier prize offerings in the annual Labatts Open.

Mick made it quite plain later that he would not have accepted the car. He shouted, he explained, to avoid "temptation."

Canadian amateur champion Doug Roxburgh of Vancouver also made it very obvious that "wouldn't hesitate declining" the prize.

The tone of both golfers smacked of sincerity, and that's welcomed. Two of the province's best young golfers have no desire to turn professional.

On the subject of amateurism, the popular rumor in the Blue Room concerned Wayne Vollmer. The Vancouver professional was ticketed to play, but had to beg off an hour before tee-off time because of bursitis in his shoulder. He had trouble lifting a club, let alone swinging.

Vollmer, winner of the Canadian junior championship at Colwood several years ago, was reported interested in being reinstated as an amateur. Vancouver golfers who know him best say it isn't so.

Vollmer now is working as a stock broker, but he'll continue to play along as a professional.

Out-ofbounds miseries struck some of the best at Cedar Hill. Among the victims were Roxburgh, Ron Willey and Norm Reid.

Reid stood on the 18th tee Sunday needing only to par in for a three-under 62. The Vancouver Club assistant smacked two OB, but birdied his third ball for a triple-bogey seven and a final 65.

Willey also drove two out-of-bounds on the same hole Sunday, and Roxburgh suffered the misery on Saturday. Roxburgh also went OB on the 11th hole Sunday, then hit his second ball three feet from the stick and dropped the putt for a remarkable par four.

Bobby Cox, with the winners' cheque tucked in his shirt pocket, described his weekend victory as a "satisfying start" for a summer during which he hopes to "play a lot of golf."

Cox, runnerup Bill Wakehame of Cowichan and Glen Meadows' pro Dick Silverberg were among the many who will be moving to Eugene and the start of the Payless Classic this week. Cox also says he will play in the Nanaimo and Cowichan Opens.

Finally, among the notes left over from the weekend, there's Dave Donaldson. He's the son of Art, the former keeper of Gorge Vale's greens. Dave tied Cec Ferguson as runnerup low amateur, confesses he has acquired more finesse since enrolling at Oral Roberts University in Oklahoma on a golf scholarship.

Dave has his sights set on making the B.C. Willingdon Cup team this year.

KELLY SPURNS OFFER BUT CANUCKS WAIT

VANCOUVER (CP) — Red Kelly says he won't accept the position of coach and general manager of Vancouver Canucks of the National Hockey League, but the Canucks are still hoping he'll change his mind.

Coley Hall, who is handling the hiring for the Canucks while team president Tom Scallen waits to begin his appeal against a four-year prison term for theft by conversion and issuing a false prospectus, said recently that Kelly had said he might be interested in coaching the Canucks.

Ten days ago, Hall said Kelly "wants more time to think it over" and the club wouldn't be naming a new coach until June.

In a telephone interview from his Pittsburgh home, Kelly, fired midway through last season by Pittsburgh Penguins, said he told Hall then he wasn't interested.

"Yes, I turned it down," Kelly said Sunday. "When I did I was fully expecting Coley to go out and hire someone else that afternoon, but he told me he had decided to put off his decision until June and maybe something would come up to change my mind."

Asked whether something could turn up, he said, "Anything is possible."

Tenacious CFB Wins

Tenacity paid off Monday as CFB Esquimalt came from behind to nip Bell's Men's Wear 5-4 in eight-inning Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League game at Heywood Avenue Park.

The loss tumbled Bell's from first place.

Esquimalt errors, coupled with a double by Steve Bishop and a triple by Don Frampton, gave Bell's a 4-2 lead after six innings.

In the seventh, Esquimalt caught up as Jay Lapeyre doubled and scored on a single by Dave Kirkwood, who scored and tied the game when Bell's committed an error on a drive by winning-pitcher Wayne Cripps.

University School Takes Track Crown

VANCOUVER — St. Michael's University School of Victoria shaded St. George's of Vancouver by only five points Sunday to win the team title in the B.C. independent schools track and field championships.

The Victoria school scored a total of 137 points to 132 for St. George's, 89 for third-place Brentwood College and 71 for fourth-place Shawnigan Lake Boys' School.

St. George's took first place in the junior (under-16) section with 91 points to 84 for second-place St. Michael's University School and 81 for third-place Glenlyon of Victoria. Brentwood College was fourth with 36 points and Shawnigan Lake fifth with 31.

One of the outstanding efforts of the day was that of Ian Campbell of University School, who swept the long jump, high jump and triple jump competitions and set a meet record with a leap of six feet one inch in the high jump.

Other fine preformances were by Brian Titus and Alan Howard, both of St. Michael's. Titus won the gruelling 3,000 metres but still had enough strength left to finish second in the 1,500 metres. Howard won the 400 metres and was second in both the pole vault and discus.

St. Michael's swept all four relay races — the 4x100 metres and 4x400 metres in both senior and junior divisions.

Grace Edges Tom Morris

Karl Fawthorpe of Victoria was seventh.

A shorter "B" race was won by Bill Dove of Vancouver. Ken Ferris of Victoria placed 10th.

At Firestone, we inspect a lot of tires on customers' cars. And we see a lot of tires that have been ruined long before their time.
Most times, improper wheel alignment is the culprit. When wheels are out of true, the tires are scuffed, and scraped. Tread will be worn off on one edge. There may be bald patches showing up.

Times News Services

HOUSTON — Skylab astronaut Paul Weitz stuffed himself into a $1.6 million barrel Monday to study how the heart muscle might become flabby in the weightlessness of space.

As scientist-pilot Dr. Joseph P. Kerwin stood by, the barrel was sealed tightly at Weitz's waist and the pressure inside was lowered to produce the same stress he would experienceif he were suddenly to stand up on earth.

"We ran the whole run," Kerwin reported to space agency doctors in Houston's mission control centre. "He was perspiring at the end, but his figures were just about normal."

Weitz also rode a $6 million Rube Goldberg bicycle which doesn't move. Equipped with a mass spectrometer, a vectercardiagram as well as a respiratory hose, this superbicycle measures the amount of energy a man puts out when he is doing heavy exercise.

Although the temperature inside the space station had fallen from 125 to 88 degrees since the thermal umbrella was put up over the scorched skin of the workshop, it was still too hot to pedal at full speed. Weitz found he had to use his hands too much and could not work his leg muscles well.

"It's just too damned hot in here to go 200 watts (full speed) on the bicycle," Kerwin said.

Today, the Skylab astronauts point a battery of telescopes at the sun and hope to give scientists their best look yet a how this sphere of gases controls our solar system.

Physicists also hope the experiment will help unlock the secret of controlled thermonuclear fusion, the source of the sun's energy. This might aid in the search for an unlimited, pollution - free power source on earth.

Ground controllers completed an automatic checkout of the $107-million array of six telescopes Monday, and Charles Conrad, Kerwin and Weitz plan to put it in operation today, the fifth day of the scheduled 28-day orbital flight.

"The big advantage over earth telescopes is that we'll be operating it above the earth's atmosphere, which filters out most of the x-ray and ultraviolet radiation from the sun and stars and thus leaves big holes in interpretation and understanding," Conrad said before the launching.

The astronauts want especially to study solar flares and sunspots that affect weather and communications on earth.

GRAYBEARD SWEEP CONFIRMED

With all Swiftsure boats in Monday and finish times and handicaps computerized, race officials confirmed Graybeard's sweep of all trophies within her grasp.

Queen of them all, Lol Killam's ketch of the Royal Vancouver Yacht Club, came first over-all, first home, first in division 1 and first around the Swiftsure Bank mark.

Other Swiftsure winners, announced late Monday:

Vladimir Plavsic's 30-foot Scampi Orao of the West Vancouver Yacht Club, who finished first in division IV, International Offshore Rule. Orao, smallest boat in the race, wins the Royal Vancouver Yacht Club Trophy.

Y. Teats' White Squall of the Tacoma Yacht Club came first in division A, Pacific Handicap Racing Fleet, winning the Corinthian Yacht Club Trophy.

Roger Hoffman's Swift I of the Everett Yacht Club was first boat in division B, PHRF, capturing the Cape Flattery Trophy.

City Likes Language Study Plan

Greater Victoria school board hopes to be among the first in Canada to participate in the Linguistics Volunteer Corps — an experiment in language-student exchange.

The scheme was announced at the Canadian School Trustees Association annual general meeting in Quebec last week and will be a joint federal-provincial project.

Board chairman Peter Bunn, who attended the meeting, said Victoria has already informed the federal government it wishes to participate.

Starting this September, 200 university students will have their fees, living expenses and travel fare paid by the federal government in a year's exchange with another university, in another language area of Canada.

Besides taking university courses, the students will go into local high schools to help with language instruction.

In Victoria, for example, a French-speaking student would attend UVic and travel to the district's secondary schools giving students assistance with their oral French.

The program will run as an experiment for two years.

"I've talked to some kids about this and they think it's a very good idea," says Bunn. "It'll be kids teaching kids — and that works."

Phone Workers Veto Pension Settlement Plan

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Federation of Telephone Workers of British Columbia has rejected a B.C. Telephone Co. proposal to settle pensions on company terms and use the next two years to exchange information on the prime contract issue.

Union spokesman Bill Clark said Monday "nothing ever happens" when that type of proposal is made.

He said a 1968 conciliation board report called on the company to make available information on splitting its non-contributory pension plan into two sections for bargaining unit and management employees, but nothing was done.

He said there was also a letter of understanding in the settlement of the 1969 strike for the parties to discuss matters of mutual interest.

Last week the company's negotiating officers urged ongoing pensions discussions based on this year's majority and minority conciliation board recommendations.

Clark said the union is sticking with majority award calling on the company to peg contributions at 5.67 per cent of payroll.

The union is taking a province-wide vote of acceptance among 8,500 members, which is expected to be completed by Jun 4.

No further negotiations are expected until then.

SUSPENSIONS INVALID?

OTTAWA (CP) — The Supreme Court of Canada was asked Monday to invalidate provincial legislation that suspends the drivers' licences of persons convicted of impaired driving.

The court began hearing appeals against such provincial action in Ontario and Prince Edward Island. But the constitutional question is such that there are interventions from Quebec, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, British Columbia, Saskatchewan and Alebtra.

At issue is the right of provinces to suspend licenses when such action is not taken by magistrates upon conviction of impaired driving, an offence under the Criminal Code of Canada.

The appellants' basic argument is that federal law is paramount over any legislation passed by the provinces and, as the laws in this case conflict, the provincial law is ultra vires — outside the law — and cannot be applied.

The provinces say the Criminal Code sections may infringe on their constitutional right to regulate traffic on their highways.

The issue is being fought in two cases.

Stewart Bell, a mailman of Belle River, P.E.I., was convicted in December, 1972, of impaired driving and fined $100.

His licence was not suspended by the magistrate, although Section 236 of the Criminal Code gives him this prerogative.

The other case involves Gordon Russell Ross, a building inspector in Windsor, Ont.

He was convicted of impaired driving Aug. 22, 1972, and fined $200. He appealed the sentence and last January it was changed.

He was forbidden to drive for six months except between the hours of 8 a.m. to 5:45 p.m. Monday to Friday in the course of employment and going to and from work.

His licence was not suspended and the registrar of motor vehicles was so advised.

The provinces argue that provincial legislation suspending licences is valid because it comes under their right to set conditions of licensing and regulations of highway traffic provided in the British North America Act.

'Buck-Is-a-Buck'—Barrett

NEW YORK (CP) — Premier Barrett winds up a three-day visit to New York today confident that U.S. business leaders will not turn their backs on his administration.

The premier, who leaves on a European tour tonight, said in an interview that he has "every confidence we can come to terms" with U.S. businessmen.

He said he was not in New York to borrow money, but rather to reassure the Americans that the climate for investment in B.C. remains attractive, and in turn be reassured by them that they are not looking away from his New Democratic Party administration.

"A buck is a buck," he said. "It will go where you can make a buck. But right now there is no market in B.C. for U.S. funds."

Barrett said there will be a surplus budget this year, and there was about $98 million left over from the previous administration of W. A. C. Bennett.

The premier was to meet with a syndicate of seven leading financial houses today to discuss B.C. investments.

The B.C. government no longer is in favor of welfare for corporations, such as loans and handouts, he said. "We don't like corporations to be dependent on the state. But we are interested in an equity position."

Monday night, the premier and his wife went to see the Broadway musical Irene, starring Debbie Reynolds. There was a private dinner with financiers and the long day of meetings today with the financial houses.

A mix of U.S., British and Japanese investments would be welcomed, Barrett said. Growth possibilities, especially in northern development, were tremendous.

Barrett chided Ian D. Sinclair for making an implied threat last week to take his Canadian Pacific Ltd. subsidiary headquarters out of B.C. if the NDP government imposes restrictive tax legislation.

"I don't understand it," Barrett said of Sinclair's feelings. "It's just not good business. . . . I just think that Mr. Sinclair is being wistful. . . .

"Mr. Sinclair thought it was the same old ball game with the new government, but it's not.

"There are no more handouts, no welfare for companies," Barrett added.

Sinclair said it was possible Canadian Pacific Air Lines Ltd. and Cominco Ltd. might move out of B.C.

High School SUB Shaping At Belmont

In old green buildings behind the school, students at Belmont Senior Secondary are setting up what they say is B.C.'s first high school student union building.

In the six-room structure, part of the old school now used for extra classrooms, students plan to develop a common area, run solely by the students.

With approval from Sooke school board, the school's drafting class has drawn blueprints for the building, construction classes are planning to carry out renovations and textile classes will sew curtains.

The building will house a student lounge, student's council room and study hall, lunchroom, recreation room and central co-ordination room.

Student council president Jim Wallace said today actual work on the building will not begin until the fall but committees are already organizing the project.

RAISE FUNDS

Starting with a $400 grant from students council, they hope to raise up to $1,500 through summer activities such as car washes and bottle drives and a fun fair in September.

"It won't really cost us much," Wallace says. "We just have to pay for construction materials. Most of the things will be made by us or we'll be able to get for free."

The building will be open to all students at a tentative membership fee of $1 a year, with a monthly fee of 25 cents.

Wallace thinks the centre will be open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. for students with free time and may open Friday nights for special activities.

NOT A HANG OUT

"Don't get it wrong," Wallace said, "this isn't just going to be some hang out."

The building will be maintained solely by the students, who have already talked out some definite rules of conduct for the centre. One student will always be on duty and make sure students aren't just "skipping out" of regular classes.

Teachers will be welcome at the centre if they wish to sit and talk with students or maybe challenge them to a game of pool but the students wish to make it their own endeavor.

Most of the work on the centre will be done after school hours and the first major project in September will be a massive "paint-in" to the outside of the building.

Right To Work Groups Merge

A British Columbia right-to-work council is being formed, it was announced Monday.

Groups making up the council include the Vancouver Island Right to Work Association, Victoria Homebuilders' Association, equipment and truck logger groups and East and West Kootenay independent contractors.

A spokesman said the council will have 2,500 employer members and will seek other members from the ranks of the non-union work force.

The council's stated goal is to unite independent associations for the right to work without union affiliation.

Columnist Appointed To Board

Evelyn Root, who writes a consumer column for the Vancouver Sun under the byline Penny Wise, has been appointed to a new food prices review board formed by the federal government.

Mrs. Root, 2740 Wale Road, Colwood, will be one of five board members looking into rising good prices.

Consumer Affairs Minister Herb Gray gave the names of board members to the House of Commons Monday.

Beryl A. Plumtre of Toronto, a long-time consumer activist, will head the board. The other members are Dr. Gordon L. Burton of Claresholm, Alta.; W. Grant Thompson of Halifax; and Louis H. Lorrain of Baie d'Urfe, Que.

The board was recommended by the special Commons committee on food prices. However, the Conservatives have said the board will be useless and have urged a 90-day freeze on prices and incomes.

Anderson Raps Barrett Walkout

B.C. Liberal leader David Anderson criticized Premier Dave Barrett Monday for the premier's alleged walkout from last week's federal-provincial conference of first ministers.

"When eleven first ministers are called together to discuss matters of common concern, surely it is important that they deal with the people's business and not indulge in headline hunting," Anderson said in a press release.

"Previously British Columbia had a premier who often did not bother to attend such discussions. We now have a premier who does, but does not bother to stay to hear what others have to say. It appears that the progress we have made is slight," he said.

The incident referred to by Anderson occurred when Barrett did not attend a session of the conference dealing with a matter which he said did not concern the provincial governments.

Barrett is in New York today meeting with representatives of various Wall Street financial groups (See Page 16).

Anderson also said it was regretful that the federal-provincial conference failed to resolve the problem of what to do about rising health and welfare costs.

"It is apparent that large government revenues at both the federal and provincial levels have led this matter to be treated with much less urgency than it should be," he said.

He said health and welfare costs are rising faster than average incomes, "and yet nothing significant was done to deal with this problem. It will now, no doubt, be delayed until it becomes even more difficult to resolve."

Corbett Wins Byelection At Campbell R.

CAMPBELL RIVER—Donald (Corky) Corbett has won the byelection to fill the seat vacated by former alderman Jack McLeod.

Corbett will complete the remaining six months of McLeod's term.

Corbett won with 283 votes compared to 95 for runner-up Joe Bundy. Ed Selby polled 94 and Jim Gillespie, 62.

A total of 537 votes were cast with three spoiled ballots. Just 12½ per cent of the electorate turned out to vote.

Chamber Official On First Flight

Campbell River Chamber of Commerce president Norman McLaren will fly to Victoria Friday aboard the inaugural flight of Island Airways Ltd. service to the capital city.

McLaren will be met by officials of Victoria Chamber of Commerce when the seaplane lands in the Inner Harbor at 8:55 a.m.

Island Airways of Campbell River will have two flights per day Monday to Friday connecting its home base with Comox and Victoria.

There will be one flight per day on Saturday and Sunday.

On Friday Victoria chamber officials Jack McKernan and David Bayliss, co-chairmen of transportation committee, will catch the first plane up-Island at 9:20 a.m. to visit chamber officials in Campbell River.

Meanwhile, in Victoria McLaren and Victoria chamber officials will participate in another inaugural, the first official cruise of the newly-commissioned CPR vessel, the Carrier Princess.

The new ferry will carry freight and some passengers between Swartz Bay and downtown Vancouver.

The inaugural run, however, will leave from the Belleville Street wharf for a short cruise in the Strait of Juan de Fuca.

Ganges Man Never Came Out of Coma

A 25-year-old Salt Spring Island resident died Monday evening without regaining consciousness after he was flown by Canadian Forces helicopter to Royal Jubilee Hospital.

Ganges RCMP said it looked as though Lawrence Plyatiuk of 352 Ganges, found unconscious in a field near Ganges, had died of an overdose of prescription drugs.

Police said Plyatiuk had been on workmen's compensation following an injury and had been taking some kind of drugs.

Meanwhile, a 14-year-old girl who was watching the helicopter land near the hospital was hit by a car while crossing Fort Street.

6 MEN, DOG ON BIG PADDLE

EDMONTON (CP) — Six men and an 18-month-old golden Labrador retriever from the SPCA Monday set out on what they call the longest inland canoe voyage ever charted.

Led by Rick Kemp, the crew hopes to traverse 6,312 miles of North America's waterways from Rocky Mountain House in the Alberta foothills, to New Orleans, La., at the mouth of the Mississippi. They hope to arrive at their destination next February, in time for that city's Mardi Gras celebrations.

The crew will represent Edmonton during the Mardi Gras and will also be participating in the 300th anniversary celebration of the exploration of the Mississippi River by Quebec-born explorer Louis Jolliet and the French Jesuit, Rev. Jacques Marquette.

Hunt Wanted to Assassinate Castro

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Watergate conspirator and former CIA agent E. Howard Hunt, who helped plot the 1961 Bay of Pigs invasion of Cuba, says he recommended to CIA superiors that Fidel Castro be assassinated as part of the scheme. His proposal was never approved.

Hunt makes the disclosure in a forthcoming book in which he describes his role and that of the Kennedy administration in the ill-fated invasion by several hundred Cuban exiles who were organized and trained by the U.S. to overthrow Castro's regime.

A copy of the printer's galleys for the book, to be published in November by Arlington House, was obtained by UPI.

In it, Hunt charges that Kennedy tried to "whitewash the New Frontier" when the invasion failed by "heaping guilt on the CIA."

Kennedy accepted responsibility for the Bay of Pigs fiasco at the time but much of the blame for its initiative and implementation was placed on the CIA by others.

Hunt said he proposed assassinating the Cuban leader because he believed that "without Castro to inspire them the rebel army and militia would collapse in leaderless confusion."

Hunt said his proposal was to "assassinate Castro before or co-incident with the invasion." He added that the role of carrying out the killing was "a task for Cuban patriots."

He said he was told by Richard Bissell, chief of the Central Intelligence Agency's clandestine services, that his plan was being considered by a "special group" within the government.

But Hunt said: "So far as I have been able to determine no coherent plan was ever developed within CIA to assassinate Castro, though it was the heart's desire of many exile groups."

Hunt's part in the invasion plan included organizing Cuban exiles in Florida and co-ordinating their activities with the invasion forces being trained by U.S. air force and army specialists which included the army's special forces unit.

He said plans had called for a Cuban exile executive committee with Hunt at their side to enter Cuba after the invasion, declare themselves a "government-in-arms" and call for military aid.

Under the plan, the U.S. was prepared to immediately recognize the exiles and provide "whatever might be necessary to overthrow Castro," Hunt said. "American ships would be standing near Cuban waters so help wouldn't be unnecessarily delayed."

On Saturday, April 15, Hunt recalled, he and a group of CIA officials and military officers studied cables in the Pentagon's war room which reported that "rebel" B26 planes had bombed and strafed Cuba's three main airfields in preparation for the invasion.

On the following day, Hunt said an examination of U2 photographs of the raids showed the rebel pilots "had claimed more destruction than actually occurred" and a "cleanup strike" was ordered just as CIA deputy director Charles Cabell entered the room.

Man. Insurance Rifts Healed

WINNIPEG (CP) — Manitoba's independent auto insurance dealers appeared to have patched up their past differences with the provincial government and are concentrating on getting more government insurance business.

At its first annual meeting Monday, the Autopac Agents' Association of Manitoba passed resolutions asking the motor vehicles branch to withdraw from selling Autopac, the provincial government to allow all agents to handle driver's license renewals, and agents to market government fire insurance should the province enter that field.

Association president Dick Arnason said he saw a government role in administration of the Manitoba public insurance corporation — Autopac — but not in the actual selling.

He reported the association made solid progress in its first year, had won concessions from the corporation to permit agents to sell their businesses, and saw improvements made to the fee schedule.

An Unreachable Goal

EDMONTON (CP) — Higher education can not be made available to every qualified person in Alberta who wants it, Dr. Max Wyman, president of the University of Alberta, said Monday.

Universal accessability to "the resources of higher education is beyond the scope of this province," Wyman said.

Throughout Canada, governments had accepted universal accessability to higher education as their goal.

"As sincere as their conviction might be, the implication of the possible attainment of such a goal is a hoax that is causing frustration and hostility for those people who seek the upward economic mobility a professional education can give."

At present, the university receives about 600 applications from fully-qualified Alberta students who seek admission to the faculty of medicine. Only 118 are accepted.

Stiffer MD Tests

EDMONTON (CP) — Doctors coming to Canada from other countries will in about two years face more stringent examinations before being allowed to practise in this country, the president-elect of the Alberta Medical Association said Monday.

Dr. Grant McPhail told a service club meeting the tightening of standards is not aimed at doctors from any specific countries. It was part of an over-all attempt to improve the practice of medicine.

However, he specifically mentioned that he considers medical training in Pakistan and India to be sometimes not up to the quality of Canadian training.

Grants Boosted

REGINA (CP) — The provincial cabinet has increased maximum loans and grants for projects undertaken through the human resources development agency.

Maximum loans are increased to $10,000 from $5,000 and maximum grants are increased to $5,000 from $2,000.

In addition, the agency makes grants of up to $2,500 available for feasibility studies. Projects under the agency are aimed at enhancing the economic or social well-being of disadvantaged persons.

$800,000 Plant Set

INNISFAIL, Alta. (CP) — This town 120 miles south of Edmonton has been selected the site for an $800,000 sheep processing plant, town council was told Monday.

Cliff Doan, the Conservative member of the legislature for Innisfail, advised council the site will be in the town's industrial park and will employ 50 persons.

The facility will be built by the provincial Sheep and Wool Commission and operated by the Alberta Lamb Producers' Co-operative.

Details on the start and completion of construction were not immediately available.

Escape Was Protest, Says Con on Run

VANCOUVER (CP) — John McCann, still at large after his escape more than a week ago from the British Columbia penitentiary, said he escaped from the institution as "a form of protest."

McCann, in an interview with reporter Dave Stockand of the Vancouver Sun, said the B.C. Penitentiary is one of the most escape-proof in Canada, "although this might sound like a ludicrous statement coming from myself."

McCann also criticized the prison system and the complaints there aren't enough guards to provide security.

"They say the prisons are over crowded and they haven't got the staff. Well here, in 1960, they had 850 inmates and they didn't have half the security staff they have now. They didn't have two barbed wire fences around the exercise area . . .

"The B.C. pen is a maximum security penitentiary. The majority of the inmates want the same regulations put into effect at the B.C. pen that are in effect in every maximum security pen in Canada. Proper exercise, proper facilities, visiting . . ."

The 27-year-old fugitive was serving 21 years for armed robbery and assaulting a prison guard when he escaped May 19 from the prison in New Westminster.

The reporter said he was phoned by McCann, who said he wished to "set the record straight" and met with the fugitive after the phone call. McCann proved "beyond my doubts" that he was the fugitive, the reporter said.

McCann said he escaped from the maximum-security institution by scaling three fences, adding that he had no trouble until he came to the last fence.

There were two dogs outside the fence, he said.

"One was a German Shepherd and the other I can't remember, a spaniel or something, and they were barking to beat all."

The barking attracted a man with a truck parked nearby, McCann said.

"He says, 'I think you better go back inside.' Meanwhile, there's nobody around but me and him.

"So I started climbing the fence anyway. As soon as I did that, he went back in his truck and took off.

"I got down to the highway. I just walked down, I didn't run.

"People said they saw me running with my hands bleeding. But as soon as I got over the fence, I just balled a handkerchief in my hand. My hand wasn't bleeding that much.

"In just minutes I was on way to Vancouver."

McCann said he was in Vancouver just for the last weekend and would be gone again Monday morning.

What would he do?

"I go to work when I get out. Almost every time I got out I got a good-paying job. I don't hate anything about work, I love working.

"I work my ass off. I really do."

He is resigned to an eventual return to prison.

"I'm going to get caught. I don't look forward to it but it's a fact of life.

"I mean, I just don't have the ability to disappear off the face of the earth. I don't think anybody has. That's why I don't worry."

When he is caught, McCann said, "I'm just hopeful that I'll be transferred back to Quebec . . . get into a program. But the B.C. pen, there's nothing there for me. I couldn't see any daylight at all."

FLOOD DANGER OVER FROM PEACE SLIDE

FORT ST. JOHN (CP) — Sunny weather and erosion have combined to end flooding danger from a landslide that blocked the Peace River 20 miles north of here Sunday.

RCMP said by Monday night several channels had eroded and river flow had returned to normal.

The blockage occurred about midnight Saturday when a half-mile section of land slid into the river, blocking it for 12 hours. RCMP said the slide was caused by heavy rainfall in the area.

Gas Tax Urged for Transit

VANCOUVER (CP) — Richmond MLA Harold Steves says a regional tax on gasoline should be imposed to help finance rapid transit in the Greater Vancouver area.

Steves told a meeting of the Vancouver area council of the New Democratic Party that the British Columbia government should also allot part of the revenue from the gasoline sales tax toward the transit system.

Egg Price Hike 'Justified'

Agriculture Minister Dave Stupich said Monday the recent increase of two cents per dozen in the price of eggs is "more than justified" by increases in the cost of prairie-grown poultry feed for B.C. egg producers.

Stupich said there has been no indication from B.C. egg wholesalers that they will go to producers from other provinces for their supply. He said he has met with the chief egg wholesaler for Safeway, the largest wholesaler in the province, who told him that Safeway will continue to support B.C. producers.

The minister said he intends to meet soon with other wholesalers.

Meanwhile, in Cranbrook, a decision on a motion to quash a search warrant used in seizing 55,000 Manitoba eggs from Super - Valu stores in the Trail area and an application to test the constitutionality of the British Columbia Egg Marketing Board have been put off to June 8.

Mr. Justice H. C. McKay of the B.C. Supreme Court agreed to the delay when court opened Monday at the request of F and W Wholesale Ltd. of Trail, which operates six Super-Valu stores in the Trail area.

The eggs were seized because they had not been purchased through the egg marketing board. They were selling at lower prices than B.C. eggs.

F and W Wholesale spokesman Esther Wood says her company will continue to import the lower-priced Manitoba eggs.

Coal Mine Fire Kills Three Men

Six miners were injured as about 125 men initially trapped by the fire scrambled to safety through other exits in the Joban mine.

An explosion was at first believed to have caused the fire but an investigation showed there was no explosion.

Mayor Is Given the Bum's Rush

TORONTO — Hamilton Mayor Victor Copps was escorted from the Ontario Legislature's public gallery by two police officers Monday when he tried to speak against plans for regional government for Wentworth County.

Mayor Copps tried repeatedly to speak to the House, but was told several times to sit down by Speaker Allan Reuter. When he refused, the Speaker ordered the sergeant-at-arms to escort Copps from the chamber.

The sergeant-at-arms was unable to move the mayor who continued speaking with one arm wrapped around a thick wooden pillar. Two rovincial police constables pried him loose and led him outside.

There the mayor told reporters he had attempted to get the government to give him "some of the consultation" the government had promised on implementation of regional government for his area.

NOTED OBOIST Eileen Gibson, music instructor at the University of Victoria, has been chosen as an instructor this summer at the Teachers' Performance Institute in Ashland, Ore. The four-week course is designed to help school music teachers improve instrumental and vocal skills.

THREE VALLEY GAP, B.C. — Pioneer journalist Ma Murray tore into fellow newsmen at a retirement party in her honor here.

Publishers, editors and columnists from all parts of British Columbia were on hand in this ghost town 12 miles west of Revelstoke to hear her charge them with allowing "that dictator (W.A.C.) Bennett" to stay in power for 20 years and then permit "that socialist crowd" to replace him.

During her speech, however, the 86-year-old newspaper woman admitted she'd voted for the New Democratic Party in last year's provincial election — "there was no Liberal candidate" — but added "that bunch in Victoria will take away every scrap of initiative and freedom and democracy we have in this beautiful province."

NEW YORK — Entertainer Liza Minelli returned from England Monday, refusing to discuss rumors that she may marry British actor Peter Sellers.

"That's bloody private," she said to a swarm of reporters who asked the question when she arrived at Kennedy Airport. She added, however, that Sellers is a "lovely, lovely man."

She also said she has no intention of seeing her former beau, Desi Arnaz Jr.

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio — After holding out for four months in a dispute over a parking ticket, Charles Hall of Youngstown finally paid his $10 parking fine — with a heavy, heavy piece of cardboard. Hall, who contended he was not parked illegally when ticketed, pasted 1,000 pennies on a large piece of cardboard and presented it to the municipal court clerks.

BLOOMFIELD HILLS, Mich. — "I've got to do my thing," says John De Lorean, a General Motors vice-president who dropped out of the corporate hierarchy to become what some acquaintances term a "glorified social worker."

The thrice-married engineer chucked it all because, he says: "I want to be involved with people — and it's something new, something I've never tried before."

OTTAWA — New Democrat Leader David Lewis says the Unemployment Insurance Commission asked a pregnant woman for the place and duration of her confinement.

"Behind the barn," the woman replied on the benefits application form. "It took three-quarters of an hour."

Lewis told the convention of the Association of American Editorial Cartoonists that the woman complained that such details were no business of the UIC.

That gag — he did not swear to its truth — was one of a string he tried on the cartoonists, confiding that a bright touch was "no easy task for one who takes things seriously."

HOOKERS OF THE WORLD UNITE—UNION SLOGAN

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Prostitutes are being organized into a craft guild here by Margo St. James. An advisory board of businessmen and authors is supporting her movement.

Her motto is, "Hookers of the world unite. You have nothing to lose but cop harassment."

The Point Foundation at Glide Memorial Church has given a grant of $5,000 for the group to begin its work.

Novelist Herbert Gold, a board member, said that Miss St. James was working for a good cause.

"I've known her for 12 years and she is always doing good things," he said.

Miss St. James, 35, said she was recruiting for her organization, called Coyote, from the streets and jails because she wants to change the way society treats, punished and stigmatizes prostitutes.

She said she chose that name because "coyotes are the most promiscuous animal."

"This is an essential service industry of the city and some radical changes are now due," said the Bellingham, Wash., farm girl who "discovered a decade ago" that men in the city would pay for what she said she had been giving away since age 15.

"I've always loved sex," she said. "I might as well get paid for it.

"You can work when you want to; there's always $25 or $50 anytime you like and the hours are your own."

"She (Miss St. James) is a very gifted young woman," said Watts. "She's very wise and beneficient. She's the kind of woman who'll never let you down if you're in a jam."

"The women in prostitution take all the heat," said yet another member, author George Leonard. "Margo St. James is talking about a basic transformation in our society; the way we look at relationships between men and women."

Insurance Firm Head Facing Fraud Counts

EDMONTON (CP) — Albert *Jasma, president of Cosmo*politan Life Insurance Co. was arraigned Monday on two charges under the criminal code and two charges under the Alberta Securities Act.

Jasma, arrested earlier in the day at his Vancouver office and returned to Edmonton, was remanded to Friday when he appeared in court.

Bail was set at $15,000. He told the court he was "broke."

He was charged with issuing a false prospectus involving Canamera Enterprises Ltd. and PAP Holdings Ltd.

He was also charged with false pretenses involving a representation to Dr. R. D. M. Lewis of High Prairie, Alta., that Canamera was earning about $30,000 a month and that Seaboard Life Insurance Co. was receiving $100,000 a month.

The charge alleges that Jasma knew the representations to be false and were made by him "with a fraudulent intent to induce Dr. Lewis to advance monies to Canamera . . . obtaining from the said Dr. Lewis the sum of $25,000."

The charges listed under the securities act are:

That he, not being a registered dealer, salesman or broker, did, between June 20, 1972, and Aug. 20, 1972, at Nobleford, Alta., Edmonton and Lacombe, Alta., trade in securities of Frisian Lines Ltd., contrary to the Securities Act, and that he traded in Alberta in 1972 shares unregistered in Alberta.

CAMOSUN'S TV 'SUCCESS'

Camosun College's first foray into educational television was a significant success, the college council was told Monday night.

Councillors were presented with an evaluation report on the "ABCs of Typing" — the college's first experiment in educational television programming — and were told "significant benefits" had been realized.

The report emphasized it was impossible to estimate the size of the program's audience but said viewer feedback indicated, considering the low costs, that "the benefit-cost ratio is most gratifying."

The 14-week series last winter involved one nightly program a week presented over cable television.

Cost of producing the shows was $1,807, including the salary of faculty member Mrs. Cynthia Honeyman.

Only four students registered and paid the regular fee to get credit for the course, but at least 40 course textbooks were sold by the college alone.

Only one credit student completed the course.

Mrs. Honeyman assisted any viewers with problems in handling the course and received as many as 40 phone calls a week at her home.

"Informal discussions suggest that some viewers who benefitted most remained anonymous and unknown," the report says, "because they were not only too timid to venture to a college to take a class but also were hesitant to phone in their questions and comments."

The report said a few schools had approached the college about the possibility of purchasing or using the taped series.

No plans for more education television programs have been announced.

ACTRESSES GETTING BOMB MAIL

FLORENCE, Italy (UPI) — The fifth letter bomb mailed to an actress in Italy this year burst into flames Monday in a mail truck.

Police said the letter was addressed to actress Laura Betti in Rome. Like the other four mailed in January and February, it was sent from the Tuscany region.

Police said about 50 other letters and cards in the truck were scorched by the letter bomb, which contained gunpowder and a small vial of acid, but no one was hurt.

The earlier explosive letters were addressed to Italian actresses Mariangela Melato, Laura Antonelli and Elsa Martinelli and Solvi Stubing, a West German actress. The only person injured earlier was Miss Melato's sister, Anna, who suffered a burned eye when she opened the letter sent her sister.

Police said they did not know why the letters were sent to any of the actresses.

Cut-Rate Courses Coming for Aged

Half-price education will soon be offered to all senior citizens.

A proposal to grant 50 per cent reduction in tuition fees for senior citizens taking any course at Camosun College, was heard by a college council committee Monday night.

It will go before the full council meeting next week.

The proposal extends an earlier resolution of the council to allow persons over 65 to pay only half the regular cost of community service or "night school" courses.

It means any senior citizens wishing to take regular college courses leading to accreditation will also receive the fee reduction.

The only exception to the rule will be the "World Around Us" community service film series.

Since 75 per cent of the film series patrons are over 65 a reduction in fees would mean an operating loss.

The proposal points out that the film series provides "interesting entertainment and education" but does not involve skill development.

"On the other hand," the proposal reads, "it would seem desirable to extend the half-price arrangement for senior citizens to any course or program offered by Camosun which results in senior citizens developing new skills, knowledge and interests which may lead to fulfilling continuous activity."

No Fly By Night Operation

MIAMI (Reuter) — For a National Airlines pilot, it was just one of those days when he should have stayed home.

His London-bound 747 jumbo jet with about 300 passengers aboard was twice forced to turn back and land here with technical troubles Monday night.

National Airlines Flight 02 first encountered trouble with an undercarriage gate that refused to retract after takoff. The pilot headed out over the Atlantic, dumped thousands of gallons of fuel through the wing tip hoses and returned to Miami International Airport.

Minutes later the pilot announced: "Ladies and gentlemen, you're not going to believe this . . ."

And he disclosed he'd had to shut down one of the big jet's four engines because an instrument indicated it was malfunctioning. The plane again returned to Miami.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

An 18-year-old Victoria youth was fined $100 in provincial court Monday for possession of a concealed weapon, and $25 for possession of alcoholic beverages while under age.

Carl Goodwin, 3255 Cook, admitted carrying a loaded Crosman .22 calibre pellet pistol and four bottles of beer when stopped by police May 25 on 1400-Block Broad.

Robert Henn, 20, of Comox, was fined $100 for possession of marijuana after a March 27 meeting with police at the corner of Government and Fisgard Streets when a marijuana cigarette was found in his pocket.

Bruce Hollett, 21, of 820 Colville, was fined $100 for possession of marijuana on Heywood Avenue May 27.

In traffic court Judge Harold Alder issued a $350 fine for W. E. Hutson, of North Vancouver, for impaired driving on the Pat Bay Highway May 19. His licence was suspended one month, except for work purposes.

Ron Victor Sweett, 24, of 721 Chesterlea Road, and H. E. Jefkins, 43, of 49 Pilot, were both fined $350 for impaired driving May 26.

A 24-year-old man who was fined $50 on May 24 for wilfully damaging Saanich police department property had no connection with a theft investigation being carried on by police.

Arthur Longley, 4214 Springridge, pleaded guilty to damaging two phones near the police station's cell area, may 23.

WHALER REVIVAL

NEW BEDFORD, Mass. (AP) — Five men who want to revive the romance of old whaling ships in this famous port have gone to Canada to see whether a 138-year-old whaling ship can be raised from the floor of Hudson Bay.

The expedition, headed by Alexander Byron, real estate dealer in nearby Marion, left Monday for the area, 250 miles south of the Arctic Circle.

He said the group will dive to film the condition of the vessel and obtain wood samples.

The ship is the Ansel Gibbs, a 111-foot whaler built in Mattapoisett. She was caught in the ice and sank in 1871. A team of Canadian divers discovered the hull two years ago.

Byron said if the ship is salvageable and finances can be arranged, the Ansel Gibbs could be raised in late July.

Byron said the estimated $1-million raising and restoration cost could come from a documentary film on the project. He said the cargo of whale oil and whalebone may be intact.

College Closer To Day Care

Establishment of a day-care centre at Camosun College moved a step closer Monday night with the presentation of a formal proposal to a college council committee.

The proposal calls for formation of a society to provide day-care services for children of college students and ask that facilities be found on Lansdowne campus.

Decision on the centre will be made at the college council meeting next week.

An eight-member ad-hoc committee reported day-care accommodation for 43 children was being sought by college parents right now.

The committee report suggested either a house on Argyle Street or a portable building be used for the centre. The centre itself will possibly become a teaching lab for day-care studies.

Financial assistance for the centre is available from the provincial government.

In other business, the same committee heard a proposal for leasing of Dunlop House, adjacent to Lansdowne campus.

The house was recently vacated by the Victoria Symphony Society and is owned by the University of Victoria.

The college would use the home for expansion of their Native Indian Program and thus a major portion of the rental costs would be covered by funds from the Department of Indian Affairs and the B.C. Union of Chiefs.

In Dunlop House as well, Victoria's Environmental Centre may be housed.

Committee members were told discussions are being held with the centre on the possibility of associating with the college.

"Since the centre appears to have much to offer the college in the way of library and human resources," the proposal says, "an association seems desirable."

OLD FRANK WINS ON LATE CHARGE

VANCOUVER (CP) — Old Frank S came up from third spot at the head of the stretch to win by half a length over Sails and Sunset in the sixth race at Exhibition Park Monday night.

It was Sports Hall of Fame night at the races, with three of the five 1973 inductees on hand to decorate the winners.

Ted Hunt, a schoolteacher and long-time all-round athlete, did the honors in the sixth.

Steady Eddy, winner of the fifth, was decorated by Irene MacDonald of diving fame. Badminton star John Samis decorated Mr. Hardnose in the seventh.

ALOUETTES SIGN TWO

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Alouettes of the Eastern Football Conference have announced signing of defensive end Cecil Pryor and cornerback Phil Price.

Jockey Club Plans to Protest New Bill

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Jockey Club will refuse to renegotiate its Exhibition Park racetrack lease with the Pacific National Exhibition in protest of new provincial legislation governing the PNE, the club's president said Monday.

Jack Diamond said the club will consult lawyers if the cabinet makes effective the new PNE bill, but his personal view is that they should refuse to renegotiate.

The Vancouver Sun reported earlier Monday that all long-term agreements between PNE and enterprises using the PNE facilities will become "void and unenforceable" unless ratified by the new board of directors to be named under the bill. Only leases and agreements which expire prior to Dec. 21, 1975 would be allowed to stand.

The Jockey Club's lease extends to 1994. The clause also would affect the lease of the Canucks of the National Hockey League which was to expire in 1983.

Resources Minister Bob Williams, who piloted the PNE bill through the house, said Monday the clause for renegotiation is intended to get better terms on contacts, not to void them.

Williams recently approved an agreement between the New World HockeyAssociation team, Vancouver Blazers, and the PNE for use of the Coliseum. The agreement provides for renegotiation after five years.

The minister has said the renegotiation clause was inserted in the government's bill at the request of Vancouver city council. He said the request was made March 30 at a closed-door meeting.

Williams said if the Jockey Club has a "reasonable case" then it is up to Mr. Diamond to present it to the new board and "I don't think the board will be unreasonable."

He added that the Vancouver city council thought the people were "getting a bad deal" and renegotiation will make it possible to increase the revenues so the grounds could be made "a more attractive asset."

The Sun says the renegotiation clause was not debated and its effects had been largely overlooked.

Realization of the powers contained in the amendment brought a call from MLA Bob McClelland (SC—Langley) Sunday for a stay in proclaiming the act.

McClelland said the PNE bill passed at the spring session was not necessary and the cabinet should "hold off altogether" from signing it into law.

"It's a hell of a section," he said Sunday. "It says that contracts don't really mean much.

Look! Up on the Shelf! It's . . . SUPERBURGER!

By ANN DUNSMUIR

It's a meat. It's a plant—it's Superburger!

The new ground meat mixture, christened superburger by nutritionists because of its added protein, has arrived in Victoria.

Victorians lined up Thursday morning to buy the ground beef-soy mixture at 69 cents a pound compared to 89 cents for ground beef.

The superburger is also a super seller.

Butcher Bob Gilson says his meat market in Mayfair shopping plaza sold more than 1,700 pounds the first day. He said customers who sampled the product over the weekend returned Monday to order it in 10-pound lots for their freezers.

Gilson thinks the superburger's color is its only drawback. It resembles sausage meat more than the familiar bright red beef used in hamburgers because light colored soy beans give a white shade to the mixture.

To make the mixture, Gilson combines 10 pounds of dried, flaked soy beans, 20 pounds of water and 12 ounces of beef-flavored seasonings. The soy beans cost 52 cents per pound dry. But the cost drops to 16 cents a pound for the bean and water mixture further reducing the cost to the consumer.

The mixture is allowed to soak for 30 minutes so that beans absorb moisture, and then put through the meat grinder with 70 pounds of beef.

Because soy beans contain all eight amino acids (proteins) needed for good health, superburgers are more nutritious than ordinary hamburger which often contains up to 30 per cent fat.

And superburgers don't shrink to half their original size when cooked like some meat products, leaving the diner with more bun than burger.

The new product tastes like traditional hamburger with bread or cereal added to stretch the meat — a trick housewives have used for generations.

A local housewife who decided to test superburgers on her family without warning them in advance reports they had no complaints and asked for more. The family cat, however, preferred to starve rather than eat the few remaining scraps. In fact, he tried to bury his portion.

Superburgers will make a good substitute for expensive cuts during the barbecue season and can also be used in any recipe calling for ground beef.

SUPERBURGER STROGANOFF

1 to 1½ pounds superburger or ground beef
3 slices of bacon, diced
½ cup chopped onion
1½ Tbsp flour
¾ tsp salt
¼ tsp paprika
Dash pepper
1 10-oz. can cream of mushroom soup
1 cup dairy sour cream.

Brown superburger and bacon. Add onion and cook until tender but not brown. Drain off excess fat and blend flour and seasonings into meat mixture.

Stir in soup and cook slowly uncovered, 20 minutes, stirring frequently. Blend in sour cream and heat through but do not allow to boil. Serve on toasted hamburger buns or buttered noodles.

STUFFED PEPPERS

8 medium green peppers
1 pound superburger or ground beef
½ cup chopped onion
1½ cups fresh corn or drained whole-kernel corn
1 8-oz. can seasoned tomato sauce
1 tsp Worcestershire sauce
¾ tsp salt
½ tsp monosodium glutamate
2 cups shredded, sharp process cheese
1 cup soft buttered bread crumbs.

Cut of tops of green peppers and remove seeds and membranes. Pre-cook pepper cups in boiling salted water about 5 minutes, drain and sprinkle insides with salt. If crisp peppers are desired omit pre-cooking.

Brown meat and onion and add next five ingredients, simmer about 5 minutes. Add cheese and stir until melted. Stuff peppers and stand them up in a 11x7x1½-inch baking dish. Sprinkle tops with buttered crumbs. Add 1 inch water to baking dish and bake uncovered at 350 degrees F. for 40 minutes.

War Bride-Author Bound for Canada

LONDON (CP) — Jean Ingram, an ebullient Cockney who was one of the first British war brides in Canada in 1946, is heading back to the Prairies to begin a new life the second time around.

In January, 1946, Jean Montgomery, as she then was, the young wife of a Yorkton, Sask., flight-lieutenant in the RCAF, flew in a converted Wellington bomber with six other brides to a new world that held plenty of surprises.

Within weeks she found herself working as a bush cook in remote northern Manitoba, preparing meals in a lonely mining camp for her husband and four other geologists. At any time a bear was likely to drop in as an uninvited dinner guest. Jean thinks she is probably still the only woman to have been a bush cook.

Those adventurous months, faithfully recorded in daily jottings at the time, became a book called Beating About the Bush which she wrote back in England after the breakup of her marriage to Lincoln (Monty) Montgomery.

A breezy romp in the style of Betty Macdonald's The Egg and I, it was published here by Herbert Jenkins in 1959, narrowly missed being filmed and made Jean around $1,250.

Jean has been back in England 17 years now and said in an interview Tuesday she has had a hankering for a long time to return to Canada. With a second marriage dissolved and one of her two sons studying sociology at the University of Manitoba, she decided to cross the Atlantic once again and hopes this time it's for keeps.

She leaves Wednesday for Winnipeg, where she began married life in a couple of rooms above a fried-fish shop. She'll stay with friends from the old days and may set up in business as a dressmaker. Latterly in England she has made a living running a clothes stall in a country market.

Jean also hopes to make a nostalgic journey back to Flin Flon, Man., where she has kept up with friends by mail since the mining-camp days, when she recalls the town was "really wild."

"Canada is a place where things have always happened to me," she says with cheerful anticipation. "I'll look around and see what comes up."

ABANDONED CHILD who can only give his name as "Car-Truck" has kept Edmonton welfare officials looking for parents since he was found at a hotel there in early March. The three-year-old has been placed in a temporary foster home.

Infant Ills Linked to Mixture

OTTAWA (CP) — Three Toronto doctors say borax-and-honey mixtures sold over the counter to relieve dryness of the mouth and tongue in young children are extremely dangerous and should no longer be offered to the public.

Drs. A. S. Gordon, J. S. Richard and M. H. Freedman of the Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto, say they have investigated two infants suffering from epileptic seizures and found these had been caused by borax-and-honey mixtures.

In an article in the Canadian Medical Association Journal, a magazine for doctors, they advise that doctors investigating children with seizures should enquire about exposure to boric acid compounds and borax-and-honey mixtures.

In the two cases described, one a four-month-old baby and one nine months old, the two mothers used the borax-and-honey mixtures, available from most drugstores, on pacifiers to stop the babies from crying.

Borax poisonings from acute causes, such as accidental consumption of boric acid in antiseptic solutions or salves for rashes, are well-known to doctors and can be fatal the article said.

The ingestion of small amounts over long periods, as with the use of borax and honey on pacifiers, may give rise to different symptoms, however, the article said. In these two cases, the symptoms included seizures, irritability, dry skin, mild skin rash and anemia.

Both babies improved and had no further seizures once the mothers stopped using the preparations, the doctors say.

"The childen were systematically poisoned for a period of weeks because of ignorance on the part of the parents and, more importantly, because of apparent negligence on the part of the pharmaceutical companies," the article said.

"None of the bottles carried a warning that borax and honey mixture is really poison."

Dr. Gordon Prichard and Freedman say such mixtures — "and all oral or even 'for-external-use-only' compounds containing borax" — should not be allowed for sale to the public.

Outdoor-Life Hazards Increase

INNSBRUCK, Austria (AP) — They say outdoor life is healthy, but in Austria last winter it brought the highest death toll in 14 years.

Sixty persons died under avalanches in the country's Alpine regions while skiing, hiking or just in a snowball fight.

Wastl Mariner, chief of the Austrian Mountain Rescue Service, says most of the deaths were due to "punishable carelessness" and not because of any hazards of outdoor life.

Some tourists fail to heed warnings by such institutions as the Avalanche Warning Service, seldom asking experts for advice or, as was the case of a group of 25 Bavarian mountaineers, overlooking a sign warning of extreme avalanche danger.

That oversight caused 10 deaths.

Not only foreign tourists die.

In April, four Kleinarl ski instructors — all friends of Austria's triple Alpine World Cup winner Annemarie Proell — died in an avalanche.

The men were skiing down Mount Klaxenkogel near Kleinarl. A Salzburg province avalanche expert, Markus Schmuck, said the four probably were unaware of a shift in snow and how avalanches are formed.

Schmuck said he believed once the four cut into the avalanche's snow storage area, the snow started to move all at once over a 6,000-foot section.

People hardly know that it is of no concern whether they step off an avalanche on its top, bottom or centre. Once its pressure field is disturbed the avalanche in nearly all cases starts moving on its entire length.

Compulsive Pleaser Over-Compensating

TORONTO (CP) — Beware of the person who desperately tries to please on first acquaintance, for you may end up loathing him, an American psychiatrist says.

The compulsive pleaser is over-compensating for feelings of inferiority, Dr. William Pew of St. Paul, Minn., told a meeting of the American Society of Adlerian Psychology.

"At first you think he's a nice guy," Pew said, "and then you loathe him."

He explained that the desire to please is one of four priorities that such an individual selects and follows according to the influences in the first few months of life.

The other three priorities that may dominate a personality are the attitude of moral superiority, the craving to control one-self or others and the pursuit of creature comforts.

Canadians Dig In to Help Ease Orphan Overflow

By KEVIN DOYLE

SAIGON (CP) — She's just a little wisp of a thing, Kim Linh: Endearing, deep brown eyes, a lively responsive face, no legs and only one arm.

Two years ago, Kim was a fairly normal, healthy baby; as normal as children can be in a country at war. Then U.S. bombers struck her village, north of Saigon, killing most of her family and leaving Kim maimed for life.

The squalid orphanages of Saigon are literally overflowing with children like Kim. Many are in even worse condition, the shattered victims of a savage war. Some are more fortunate. They may be physically sound or just blinded or burned by napalm.

For some of them, life holds the promise of continued suffering, poverty and, probably, early death.

To ease their difficulties slightly, a handful of Western agencies sponsor modest programs of financial assistance, although the numbers helped fall far short of the total.

One of the most important of these organizations is the Vietnam branch of Foster Parents Plan Inc., headed by Anne Davison, a graduate of Trinity College, Toronto, and a former Ottawa social worker.

The aim of Foster Parents is to encourage Canadians, Americans and Australians to "adopt" children from underdeveloped or war-damaged countries by contributing money and exchanging letters and information.

"We want to keep children with what remains of their families as far as possible," Miss Davison said in an interview, "and we also try to encourage people here to take relatives out of the orphanages with the assurance of financial aid."

As she spoke, hundreds of children with battered, poverty-weary adults lined the entrances to her small administrative building, waiting for their monthly grant. A tiny Vietnamese woman, carrying a small child, hummed with delight when she heard she had received an additional cash gift of $14 from sponsoring parents in Hamilton.

"Last year, we had 5,600 children enroled in our program here and that means that each of them received nearly $200 they wouldn't have had otherwise.

"In Canada, we ask foster parents to donate just over $200 a year. More than two-thirds is spent directly on the children with the remainder going to administrative costs. The children and the donors are asked to exchange letters monthly and sometimes I think this is almost as important as the money," Miss Davison said.

A strong, firm-looking woman now in her late 50s, Miss Davison said the conditions in which most children live are virtually beyond the comprehension of Westerners.

In the centre of Saigon, for example, a legless boy, who can't be more than four years old, sits in his own excrement on the boiling sidewalks almost every day, pathetically holding out an old hat for donations.

Miss Davison, a modest, engaging woman with a competent grip on her quickly-expanding organization, began her career as a social worker with the Children's Aid Society in Ottawa before becoming a United Church missionary in China during the Second World War and, afterwards, in Korea.

She returned to Toronto in 1963 and worked in the national office of the Anglican Church until joining Foster parents and coming to Vietnam a year ago.

"I'm basically an Anglican. But when they wouldn't send me overseas as a missionary I . . simply joined the United Church," she says. She now has a total staff of 66 people in Vietnam, including a small number of professional social workers. "But, my God, there are 700 families standing at the door waiting to be taken into the program and we have immense trouble just trying to cope."

Miss Davison was uncertain how many Canadians have "adopted" Vietnamese children but she said more than 11,000 people from Canada were in the program last year, sending donations to needy families in all parts of the world.

Foster Parents itself was founded by two British servicemen during the civil war in Spain in the late 1930s. It is not affiliated with any church or political organization.

"We now provide basic medical help, dental care and psychiatric counselling for the children. But there's so much that needs to be done and these children can't, they just can't, wait."

Wives of Canadian external affairs personnel serving with the international peacekeeping mission here have been freely volunteering their assistance to Miss Davison for the last couple of months and she says this has eased the workload enormously for regular staff.

In the suffocating heat of her administrative headquarters, Miss Davison talks of wistful memories of more relaxed days in Toronto or the Ottawa Valley, where many of her relatives and friends live near South March, Ont.

"But my place is here. If I complain, it's not because I'm doing too much but because there's still so much I can't do."

Outside, an air-conditioned, North American-built limousine honks impatiently at the dispirited crowds lining up for her attention.

European Lentil Has Future in Our Land

By HILDA BEASTALL

Lentils at 34 cents a pound are still a low priced source of protein. When we learn they were probably one of the earliest food crops cultivated by man they become more of a reintroduced food than a new food. Records show them as being known to the Bronze Age Man, and used by all civilizations where they could be grown.

Cultivated in southern Europe for centuries, and capable of being grown in the southern United States, lentil is a vine plant of the Pea Family, resembling it in habit and in the whole plant making excellent forage for farm animals.

The red lentils we buy are the fully ripened and dried seeds from the pods. They do not require soaking before cooking. They cook by simmering 15 to 20 minutes, losing the red color in the process. Having a rather bland flavor, lentils mix well with a number of other foods, either delicately flavored or the more robust.

A Lentil and Nut Mould makes a hot or cold main dish in place of meat. Serve with baked potatoes and fresh spring cabbage; or unmoulded and cold, sliced with green salad.

LENTIL, NUT MOULD

½ c. dry lentils
½ c. ground nuts (cashews or hazelnuts)
¾ c. dry wholewheat breadcrumbs
1 egg
1 tsp chopped chives
1 tsp marmite or vegemite
¼ tsp salt (when cooking lentils)

Simmer lentils slowly with salt in about two cups water until done. Add nuts, breadcrumbs, seasonings and egg. Mix, and pour into greased casserole. Slow bake at 325 degs. for 30 to 40 minutes, or until firm and beginning to brown.

By raising the temperature at the latter end of this period to over 350 for baking some cookies the mould will be crisper and browner.

The Lentil and Rice Bake is just as satisfying, and is another dish to bake in the morning while making a batch of cookies with the same oven heat. It too can be served hot or cold.

LENTIL, RICE BAKE

½ c. dry lentils
½ c. grated carrot
½ c. chopped celery tops
1 tsp chopped fresh mint
1 egg

Measure rice into one cup salted cold water. Simmer about 15 minutes, covered, until half cooked; add lentils. Bring back to simmering point and cook until both rice and lentils are tender but not mushy.

Add grated carrot, celery tops, mint and egg. Pour into greased casserole, bake at 375 deg. for 30 minutes.

You soon dicover that home cooking recipes with basic foods like brown rice, lentils and fresh vegetables are easily adaptable. You can substitute small onions for your seasoning when they are again available; you add another egg if the lentil-rice mixture is a bit thin; you use a quarter cup wholewheat flour and wheat germ mixed if no breadcrumbs.

You learn by substituting, and it makes you feel more original, and it often uses small leftovers of good food which would be wasted if remaining unused.

Top Totocalcio

ROME (AP) — An unidentified soccer fan won $500,000 for correctly predicting the results of all 13 soccer games Sunday in the weekly pool, the Totocalcio. The payoff was the largest of the year.

dear abby

Business Affairs

DEAR ABBY: If you feel that a private secretary should not sit in judgment of her boss' private affairs, then she should not be imposed upon to take insignificant, petty messages from his girl friend. After all, a secretary is employed to support the welfare of the business her boss represents.

No one should be asked to lie, and a secretary should feel remorse when she has to tell lies for her boss.

Your second offence was to inform that secretary that this is one of her secretarial duties. It is not! — Out of the Middle

DEAR OUT: And what if the boss owns his own business? A secretary is paid to convey messages to and from her boss, whatever they may be, and whether the message is from a business associate, his wife, or girl friend is none of her business. If she feels "remorse" when she tells a caller that her boss is "tied up" when he is not — or that he is "out" when he is busy, she has the privilege of finding a job that's more to her liking.

DEAR ABBY: I am 12 years old. My parents are considered nice people. My father makes a good living and Mom has never had to work. She has lots of friends and is always doing something for the church.

Now for my problem: My mom shoplifts. I've known it for several months but she doesn't know that I know. I've seen her take stuff like cans of sardines, dress patterns, cosmetics — anything she can slip into her purse. We're not poor, Abby. Mom can buy just about anything she wants. What gets me is she is always lecturing me on the importance of being honest and truthful.

What should I do? I keep thinking I should tell my father, but I just hate to. I'm so afraid Mom will get caught and sent to jail and the reputation of our whole family will be ruined. I'm the oldest. I can't take a chance on getting a letter from you at home so please put your answer in the paper but leave out my city. Thank you. — Worried for Mom

DEAR WORRIED: First, tell your mom what you've told me. (She could be suffering from "kleptomania" — an uncontrollable compulsion to steal.) With treatment, kleptomaniacs can be cured; if she doesn't stop shoplifting after that, tell your father.

DEAR ABBY: For your information, the word "Reverend" is not a title, it is an adjective. And as such, the article "the" should always precede it, followed by the man's Christian name or his initials, then his surname, i.e. "The Reverend John Jones" or "The Reverend Mr. Jones."

Beauty of Pinched Cheeks Something From the Past

By NANCY STAHL

My husband prefers the natural look in makeup.

Although I can apply an old-fashioned colored face in less time than it takes to soft-boil an egg, to achieve the impression that I am wearing nothing but a patina of radiant good health takes upwards of 25 minutes.

I am convinced that this fetish of his is all the fault of western movies. The bad girls are the ladies who lounge around Big Willie's saloon wearing pouty red lips and black warts on their upper lips. The heroine, a simple lass with a breathtaking cleavage of which she is studiously unaware, achieves beauty by pinching her cheeks and rubbing pomegranate juice on her lips.

Now even if these primitive ablutions would give me the dewey fresh bloom of health, we haven't any pomegranates. Oranges are a poor substitute, as the juice always runs and makes my chin sticky. The closest thing to a pomegranate we have is half a jar of raspberry jam, but I suspect that the seeds would ruin the effect.

And what with driving our daughter to a dentist appointment, cleaning last February's ashes out of the fireplace, and fishing 17 marbles out of the kitchen disposal, I simply haven't the time to stop and pinch my cheeks every ten minutes.

Not to mention eyebrows. When I was 13, I took a notion to shave off my eyebrows completely and change my name to Ramona. Unfortunately, when my eyebrows chose to reappear, they had shifted position completely, knitting together over my nose and petering out altogether somewhere over my pupils. Left au naturel, I look as if a hairy brown caterpillar is crawling across my forehead.

My husband labors under the illusion that I wear no makeup at all. I am not certain what he imagines that those little tubes and jars labeled blusher, gleamer, and transparent gel to be. Perhaps he thinks that they are types of sex-appeal toothpaste.

Backaches a Big Headache

LONDON (CP) — The greatest mistake man ever made, suggested a recent BBC television program, was to stand on two legs. From then on, the world's most widespread ailment after the common cold was bound to be backache.

Back pain of various kinds costs British industry around $448.8 million a year, with more lost working days than are caused by strikes.

Every day, some 50,000 workers stay home nursing their aching spines, which, as an orthopedic surgeon on the BBC program pointed out, were never evolved to stand on end, but rather to act as a "coat-hanger" for the body, supported by two limbs at either end.

Because of the difficulty of X-raying the spine and examining those critical, jelly-like discs cushioning its bottom links, doctors know little about what causes the myriad of back pains, the program said.

Scanty amounts have been spent on research in Britain. The Arthritis and Rheumatism Council has only just set aside $150,000 for the purpose. But a British executive who injured his back six years ago and was exasperated by the lack of research has done something about it.

Stanley Grundy, a member of the Institute of Directors, approached this eminent business organization for funds to sponsor a research foundation. After some initial difficulties, this now is in being, a registered charity known as the Back Pain Association.

The first of its kind in the West, the association's object is to raise funds for research and build up data on all aspects of back pain. In 1971 it helped set up a body of experts, both medical and non-medical, called the Society for Back Pain Research, which meets twice a year to exchange information.

Members now number about 80 and include orthopedic surgeons and rheumatic specialists from Britain and overseas.

Another project initiated by Grundy's association is a Back Pain Research Clinic in Bath, the elegant Somerset spa town whose naturally heated springs make it an appropriate treatment centre for such maladies. A computer has been installed to handle data on many varieties of back complaint.

The BBC television program, one of a popular science series, provided the depressing information that many expensively-designed modern chairs actually help cause or exacerbate back pain because they tilt the spine at an angle instead of giving it lumbar support.

Best of all, said the program's expert, is the Queen Anne chair with its tall, gentle undulating back which follows the natural curve of the spine.

Husband Carries Banner For Organ Donor Cause

By BRIAN McKENNA

HALIFAX (CP) — Halifax businessman Peter Andrews would like everyone in Nova Scotia to carry an organ donor card.

Mr. Andrews, chairman of the province's newly-formed organ donor program for the Kidney Foundation of Canada, has a special reason.

Recently his 34-year-old wife Diane, a mother of three young children, was the recipient of a kidney transplant at the Victoria General Hospital here. It was a reprieve from a death sentence imposed a dozen years ago.

Mrs. Andrews first learned of her kidney disease after running into trouble with her first pregnancy.

"At the time she was given from two to 10 years to live," Mr. Andrews said. "It was quite a blow to a new marriage.

"That was before the invention of the artificial kidney. All this is so new and moving so fast that it's hard to realize. . . .

"But she drifted along for a number of years with gradually declining kidney function until January of this year when she finally had to go on dialysis."

THREE IN 24 HOURS

Mrs. Andrews' five-hour kidney transplant operation on the night of April 8-9 was one of three performed at the Victoria General in a 24-hour period.

Since the kidney transplant program began at the hospital four years ago the number of operations has increased dramatically. Originally about 10 transplants were done annually. In the first four months of this year seven have already been performed.

The survival rate of the transplants is up to 90 per cent when donors are related to the patient and up to 80 per cent in unrelated donor-recipient matchups.

Donors range from infants to the middle-aged. Only a number of involved medical complications limit donors. The night Mrs. Andrews had her surgery the same donor provided a kidney for a six-foot, powerfully built farmer from Nova Scotia's Annapolis Valley region. The next day it was a Halifax businessman.

In fact, the only major limitation to the transplant program is the number of available donors. Recent legislation adopted in the province allows people to will specific organs in the event of their death.

"That's why this program is so tremendously important," Mr. Andrews said of the foundation's efforts to increase the number of potential donors.

"She (Mrs. Andrews) was extremely fortunate in having a transplant so quickly. There are people who have died as a result of kidney disease, the artificial kidney notwithstanding."

MONKEYS TRY HEARING AID

TORONTO (CP) — A Swedish doctor said this week an electromagnetic hearing aid used successfully on monkeys may be tried on people about six months from now.

Dr. Christer Liedgren, a visiting fellow from Linkoping, Sweden, at University of Toronto, told a group of neurological surgeons that the gadget's design needs to be modified and more experiments done with the kind of metal to be used.

Liedgren said the hearing aid consists of a magnet placed in the middle ear and covered with a coil. The leads from the coil are attached to a plug containing a microphone, an amplifier and a battery.

The plug is embedded in the mastoid bone behind the ear and is not covered by skin.

"That's because it will be a once-only operation," Liedgren said in an interview. The plug must be easy to reach so that the battery can be changed.

He said the unit reduces the distortion that some people hear in conventional hearing aids, increases the frequency range of sound and eliminates the ringing feedback which is so loud for some patients that bystanders can hear it.

He said the disadvantage is that its use involves an operation of implanting a foreign object in the body.

Liedgren said the gadget would not be for everyone who is hard of hearing. Many people can get along with the best of the traditional hearing aids but others cannot.

He said most of these people have inherited a hearing loss.

Others have been exposed to too much noise over too long a period, and others have suffered loss of hearing through drugs.

All unprocessed films are perishable, but color films are even more delicate than black-and-white ones. In hot and humid weather they need extra special care.

You can have a four-page leaflet that tells you how to store color film. To protect the film from moisture damage, don't open the original package till you want to use the film. Also, keep it away from heat sources and don't put it in the glove compartment of your car. In regions where the temperature climbs above 75, store your color film in the refrigerator. When you take it out, wait till the film has reached room temperature. This may take up to 3 hours.

There is also information on how to protect unprocessed color film once the package has been opened. Don't leave it in a closed car that is parked in the sun, because the rising temperature inside could seriously affect color quality.

Have your exposed film processed as soon as possible. But even after it has been processed, treat it with care and store it in a dark, dry and cool place.

For Storage and Care of Kodak Color Films write to: Editorial Service Bureau, Kodak Canada Ltd., 3500 Eglinton Avenue West, Toronto, Ontario. Please allow at least two-three weeks for delivery.

8 CARD OF THANKS

We would like to say thank you to the many friends and relatives of the late Nellie Campbell for the loving attention, gifts, flowers and cards received during her illness and at the time of her passing. Sincere thanks to Reverend A. Beaton for the beautiful service she so deserved; to Graham McCall and staff; to the Pallbearers; to Dr. Lockyer and staff; to nurses and staff on 2nd West, and all those who donated to The Canadian Cancer Society. A very special thank you to Dr. J. B. McCaw and the nurses and staff on 4th West, Royal Jubilee Hospital. The love and care of all will always be remembered. — John Campbell and Family.

I wish to express my sincere thanks to the many friends and relatives who gave their expressions of kindness and sympathy during the illness and death of my beloved wife, Mary Sutherland Gamble. Special thanks to Dr. William Graham, Dr. N. S. Lockyer and Nurses and Staff of the Victoria General Hospital. — George McDonald Gamble.

We wish to express our sincere appreciation for the kindness and sympathy received from our friends in the loss of Wallace Robert Gibson. Special thanks to Dr. Ptak, to Mrs. Wilson and her staff at Royal Jubilee Hospital, ICV, to Dr. Ken King and McCall Bros.—The Family.

I would like to thank the many friends and neighbors who sent me the beautiful cards and kind thoughts and sympathy in the recent sudden death of my son Robert.—Mary Dale

EX

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

One in Ten Is Mentally Ill

I have been informed by the National Association for Mental Health, Inc., that May is Mental Health Month, and I have here a fine pamphlet, "Facts About Mental Illness" that can be of interest to the many persons in our country who are struggling with mental problems, or who have a loved one who is depressed, schizophrenic, or simply not quite sane enough to live happily and comfortably with other people.

According to the association, one in 10 people in the United States have some form of mental illness, ranging from mild to severe, that would benefit from professional help. This means that 21 million families are affected by mental illness from someone in their immediate group.

Actually, during the years at the Mayo Clinic, I found that perhaps a third of the patients who came to me complaining of abdominal pain or other abdominal symptoms were primarily suffering from psychic troubles. Oftentimes, they were much distressed by some life-problem, but in other cases, they were suffering from a borderline schizophrenia, or a form of epilepsy which gave them not convulsions, but abdominal pain and irritability, depressions or a little stroke.

Interestingly, children suffer from mental illness about as often as do adults. Three per cent have severe emotional problems, while another eight per cent have less severe troubles, but are still unable to function normally.

In recent years, there has been a trend away from locking up people with mental problems in state and county hospitals; and the number of people discharged from this type of hospital has more than tripled since 1950.

Today, the newest concept in mental health care is that of emptying out community mental health centres.

Recently, I read a report of a number of sane persons who, unknown to the staff and doctors, checked themselves into a mental hospital. When they received the treatment that the patients were receiving, they soon felt that their own sanity was beginning to lessen. This is a strong argument for the new type of mental health outpatient clinic, where persons are not isolated from the world where they hopefully will someday be able to live comfortably.

CAMPORA RECOGNIZES CUBA

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The new Peronist government of Argentina Monday resumed diplomatic relations with Cuba after an 11-year break, a move that is expected to influence many other Latin American countries that have been re-examining the cold war policy of isolating Cuba.

Argentine President Hector Campora announced his government's recognition of the Castro government after a meeting with Cuban President Osvaldo Dorticos, who had been an honored guest at Campora's inauguration Friday.

The Argentine recognition of Cuba followed by one day Campora's lifting of the ban against the Communist Party. Both Dorticos and Chilean President Salvador Allende were lionized at the inauguration ceremonies while the U.S. envoy, Secretary of State William Rogers, was several rungs down on the protocol ladder and somewhat overshadowed by the publicity and popular acclaim bestowed on the two leftist presidents.

Free-Wheeling Youth Mean Trouble for Firms

TORONTO (CP) — Social scientists are finding that young adults are becoming less tolerant of rigid authoritarian structures and a University of Toronto professor says this means problems for corporations.

Prof. D. A. Ondrack told an industrial relations seminar Monday he does not believe that the vocal students who were complaining a few years ago about universities have become complacent with age.

It is more likely, he said, that those students have simply been dispersed as they went to work but are still fighting where they find in companies the situations they disliked in university.

Prof. Ondrack said social scientists have developed scales to measure tolerance to authority, and during the 1960s there was a sharp drop in the degree to which college students would submit unquestioningly to authority.

The results of such attitude changes were defined in real terms when Prof. John Crispo, dean of the University of Toronto's faculty of management studies, asked the audience of about 40 industrial relations executives if they had detected the shifts. The responses were that dissatisfaction had shown up in terms of higher turnover, more absenteeism and more lost time and money because of employee carelessness.

One of the points of concern to the corporation executives was in a recent paper written by Prof. Ondrack, a member of Prof. Crispo's department, and provided as background material for the seminar.

Among both white-and blue-collar workers, those under 35 generally are not content to go through a tedious apprenticeship system and wait for the benefits of seniority, the paper said. The younger workers are better educated and want more rapid advancement.

White-collar workers, traditionally given better wages and benefits, thus encouraging loyalty and patience, have lost many advantages through wage gains by blue-collar unions and inflation and "the declining advantages of white-collar employment and the influx of impatient young workers has made white-collar employment ripe for unionization," Prof. Ondrack wrote.

A corporate bureaucracy needs stability, security and predictability and the innovative individual who dislikes a rigid authority structure will not fit in such a system.

Prof Ondrack said in an interview later that top management often is insulated from lower ranks of employees and in a large corporation with several executive layers those at the top may be unaware of serious problems.

While some of the under-35s are fighting the system, others are simply dropping out, he said. This has appeared in the form of higher drop-out rates in schools and in job turnover. There also are "mental dropouts" people doing a job carelessly and mechanically only because they need the money.

SOME CHANGE GOOD

In another background paper, Prof. Ondrack adopted a more optimistic tone in discussing some changes taking place:

—Organizations are becoming more decentralized, and thus more responsive to change;

—Managerial styles are changing from an authoritarian to a more consultative and democratic nature;

—There is an emergence of a greater social consciousness in business;

Charter Students Left Up in Air

TORONTO (CP) — The fate of 1,400 Canadian students who bought tickets for charter flights to Europe after June 30 from a Toronto-based non-profit student organization does not look good.

The tickets were bought from the Association of Student Councils (AOSC) but the federal government changed charter regulations, abolishing the right of student and other affinity groups to organize charters at fares negotiated by the group and an airline.

NO EXEMPTIONS

Ron Hurd, director of the association, says that by the time the new regulations were announced at the end of December, it was already too late for AOSC to reorganize its 1973 program.

The deadline for eliminating the old system is June 30 and AOSC has eight flights booked after that.

Doug Quirt, director of the operations branch of the air transport committee, a subcommittee of the Canadian transport commission, said there will be no exemptions from the regulations.

"They were told repeatedly there would be no affinity flights out of Canada after July 1," said Mr. Quirt. "This is the same position taken with respect to other groups."

Mr. Quirt blamed AOSC for its own problems.

He says the group could have applied before Dec. 31 for permission to fly its 1973 program under the old regulations.

Mr. Hurd said that if the flights are cancelled, all money paid to AOSC will be refunded.

The organization, which represents student councils of 54 Canadian colleges and universities, has handled more than 40,000 flights for students during its three-year existence.

Awards Presented For Bikathon

The event held April 15 raised more than $5,000 to finance Victorian Days events.

Jack Hutchins, 4959 Georgia Park Terrace, received a scroll as top fund raiser. He was not eligible for one of the bicycle prizes because he is a member of the Victorian Days Society fhich sponsored the event. Hutchins raised $432 for the fund.

The inter-schools challenge trophy was won by Glenlyon School, one of 57 schools taking part in the event. Awards were presented by Bikathon organizer Peter Chipman.

Victoria Twirlers Come First

Victoria girls were judged top winners in the juvenile, junior and senior divisions of the baton competition held Saturday by the Victoria branch of the Amateur Baton Twirling Association.

Competitors in the more than 100 classes ranged in age from four to 20 and came from as far away as Campbell River and Clinton. The event, held at Lansdowne Junior Secondary, featured drill corps and dance teams as well as individual performances.

The big event of the day was the selection of a Miss Victoria Majorette for 1973 in each of the three divisions.

Fleet Tourney Starts Wednesday

Five teams will be competing in the two-day Fleet softball tournament starting Wednesday at the Naden lower field on Colville Road.

Ships entering teams are the Chadiere, Provider, Gatineau and Columbia. The fifth team, Combines, is made up from the Rainbow, various minesweepers, Oriole and St. Croix.

Games in the round-robin affair get underway at 9 a.m. each day.

Enough Kinds of Iris To Fill a Book

To write of all the kinds of Iris which may be grown and flowered here would need a huge book, for it might be possible to have one species or another blooming during each month of the year.

The late W. R. Dykes produced such a book — a monograph of the Genus Iris, preceded by a little handbook simply titled Irises, describing briefly the irises he knew. This was around 1910.

From such a huge subject, only a handful of irises can be mentioned here, and only those which have been grown in our own place; with these we have experience.

To further limit the subject, only the irises flowering now and into early June will be mentioned.

Most noticeable for their wide range of colors are the German, also called Bearded, and sometimes simply Flag-iris. These are any height from 12 to 36 inches, with rhizomes for rootstocks, thriving in su nwhere soil is sandy or gravelly to prevent winter rot.

Quite common too is Iris sibirica, now giving dainty beadless blue-purple blooms on stems three or four feet high. Narrow bright green leaves and flower stems which are round and almost rush-like are other distinguishing marks. This species thrives best in a moist loamy soil, though it does have a slender rhizomatous rootstock.

The so-called Dutch, Spanish and English irises are all bulbous, and frequently mistaken for one another. Of them, the Dutch is first to bloom. Rather stiff in habit it has become popular for forcing in cool greenhouses for cut flowers a week or so ahead of outdoors. Bright blues, yellows, and pure white is the color range.

Spanish and English irises are hard to tell when apart.

The color range of the English iris is limited to blues and white; while Spanish run through blues and purples, bright yellow, even a golden bronze as well as white. See them together in a flower show or a grower's display bed and you notice a difference in shape of bloom, difficult to describe in words.

A favorite for its simple character and the fact that it has never been known to breed with any other species is Iris pseudacorus, usually seen in its bright yellow form. Flowers are rather small, with scarcely noticeable purplish veining on the base of the blades. Another iris with sturdy rhizomes for rootstocks.

For stately height of its splended foliage all summer, Iris ochroleuca is worth garden space. In early June, large butter-yellow blooms open in succession on strong stems up to five feet tall.

Other irises can be seen in parks and gardens. These described all have rhizomatous rootstocks (the bulbous ones are noted as such) and are the easiest to grow. Reginald Farrer said in one of his books he preferred his irises to have rootstocks above the soil (rhizomatous) so he could see what was going on. Those with bulbs disappear and you never know when or why. This is true in the genus Iris.

SOLUTION WEDNESDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

In my opinion, the major deficiency in the make-up of the non-expert player is his inability to resist the urge to win a trick at the first opportunity that presents itself. This shortcoming is responsible for the loss of many contracts that should be fulfilled. As a case in point, observe today's deal, which arose in a rubber-bridge game. Neither side vulnerable. North deals.

NORTH
♠ 8 7 3
♡ A Q 5
◊ K J 10

WEST
♠ A 10 6 4 2

◊ 7 6 4

SOUTH
♠ K J 9
♡ K J 10
◊ A 9 5 3
♣ J 9 7

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	Pass	2 NT	Pass
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Four of ♠.

East put up the spade queen on West's opening lead, and South won the trick with his king. The nine of clubs was led next, and the finesse taken against West's hoped-for king. But East possessed that key card, and upon winning the trick with it, he returned his remaining spade. Declarer's J-9 was now trapped by West's A-10. When play had ended, the defenders had made four spade tricks and one club.

Declarer's play of the hand was non-expert. If it were his intention to finesse against West for the club king (rather than for the diamond queen), then there wasn't a thing he could do about preventing East from winning a trick with the king of clubs. But what declarer could have tried to do was to prevent East from returning a spade if the latter possessed the club king.

When East put up the spade queen on the opening lead, declarer should have allowed the queen to win. The five of spades would then have been played back, South would have put up the jack — and he would have had a fulfilled contract. When declarer subsequently took the club finesse, losing to East's king, East would have had no spade to play back. And whatever else he chose to return, declarer would have had no problem in handling.

By declining to win the opening spade lead, declarer would be guaranteeing his contract if the adversely-held spades were divided 5-2, with the leader having five. And if they were divided 4-3, then no matter what declarer played at trick one, the defenders would be able to win only three spades and one club. Thus the recommended play of deferring the winning of the first spade lead was "on the house:" it could never be a losing play.

FUN WITH FIGURES

Each distinct letter in this multiplication stands for a particular but different digit.

You multiply a 4-digit number by 3, and it gives a 4-digit product. That should tell you a lot about the letter S, and correspondingly about the D.

HUSH MONEY ALLEGED

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Sun says Vancouver city council is secretly paying off citizens falsely arrested by police in an apparent effort to keep the cases from being made public.

The newspaper says it obtained copies of minutes of closed council meetings as well as confidential reports from city departments which outline the cases of five persons to which payments have been made since mid-February.

The material was turned over by an unidentified alderman who said he was disturbed at council's action in keeping the payments secret, the newspaper said.

The alderman said the practice has been going on for years and has been continued by the present council, dominated by the Electors Action Movement, which won a majority of seats on council in the December, 1972 elections.

Council members supporting the secrecy say they have done so because morale in the police department would suffer if information on false arrests, including the names of arresting officers, was made public and more people might sue if they realized that some individuals had successfully sued for false arrest, he said.

One case reportedly involved an award of $5,000 to Sharon Lee Moore and her husband, Gary Lloyd Moore, who were arrested during the Gastown disturbance in August of 1971.

An accompanying report said Mrs. Moore was arrested, although she took no part in the disturance and when her husband attempted to stop police, he too was placed in a police vehicle and taken to jail.

NDP Eying Takeover Of Island Bus Lines

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

The provincial government is considering the purchase of all privately owned bus companies on Vancouver Island—if they are interested in selling.

Main target is Vancouver Island Coach Lines, third largest bus company in the province, which runs regularly-scheduled service up-Island to Port Hardy and to Victoria International Airport.

The government is also interested in the smaller firms and tourist buses, in line with its philosophy that all public utilities should be publicly-owned.

W. R. McClarty, co-owner (with Ald. Harold Olafson) of London Omnibus Tours, said he could not comment on negotiations for the purchase of the company's five double-decker buses.

"Any announcement will have to come from the other side (the government)," he said.

Other Victoria-area bus companies confirmed they have held talks with Victor Parker, director of the government's bureau of transit services, but only the London Omnibus Tours company referred to the discussions as "negotiations."

Other company spokesmen said their discussions with Parker were exploratory.

However in each case, Parker is reported to have expressed an interest in purchasing each company outright if the owner was agreeable.

Parker was not available for comment this morning.

On Monday he announced he has held talks with private bus companies with the possible intention of taking them over.

At that time he said the government is not going on a "wholesale buying spree."

"We're not in business to take over private interests if they're doing a proper job. Our only interest is in ensuring that proper service is provided.

"But if it becomes impossible for private companies to continue in their role, we'll have to look at other possibilities including ownership of motor coach lines by the government."

Parker said if the bureau determines there is a need for the government to become involved, "then it is my responsibility to report to the government on that need. I'm responsible for looking ahead and to be there where there is a need."

He said the bureau will be analyzing the need throughout the province and determining

Woman Dies in City Blaze

PRINCESS ANNE ENGAGED

The announcement came after months of denials from both the 22-year-old princess and the 24-year-old $100-a-week cavalry officer. They have been constant companions since last December.

The announcement brings into the Royal Family a man whose mother does most of her own housekeeping and whose father is only comfortably off as a director of a pork sausage and ice cream firm.

The Buckingham Palace press secretary, Ronald Allison, said the wedding would be in the early autumn — probably November — either in Westminster Abbey or St. George's Chapel on the grounds of Windsor Castle.

No Progress In Truce: Sharp

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The government announced today that Canada will withdraw its 290-man peace observer force from Vietnam by July 31.

"We are prepared if the parties to the (Paris) agreement wish, to stay for a period beyond June 30, but not later than July 31," External Affairs Minister Sharp told the Commons.

"Canada's decision to withdraw is firm and definite, but the additional flexibility should give the parties adequate time to find a replacement for the Canadian delegation," he said.

The minister noted Canada's previous position that it would pull out of the International Commission for Control and Supervision by June 30 if there was not "substantial progress."

He said this progress had not been achieved and Canada therefore would withdraw.

He said the additional 30 days presence in Vietnam would give more time for the parties to find a successor and for the conclusion of negotiations between U.S. and North Vietnamese negotiators in Paris.

The other ICCS members are Poland, Hungary and Indonesia.

The Canadian contingent on the ICCS was dispatched to Vietnam hours after the ceasefire agreement was signed Jan. 27.

50 Watched in Horror As Canadians Gunned

JOHANNESBURG (Reuter) — The Johannesburg Star published today what it said was the "first detailed account of what really happened" when two Canadian girls were killed by Zambian gunfire at the Victoria Falls earlier this month.

The front-page story, which the newspaper said was the result of a week's investigation, said that "about 50 people watched in horror" while five Zambian soldiers shot dead Christine Sinclair, of Guelph, Ont., wounded American John Crothers "and then sniped for nearly two hours at Marjan Drijber hiding behind a rock in the Zambezi river."

The Star said the report "completely refutes the Zambian explanation" that the tourists were fired at by only one sentry who feared they were about to attack a vital power station on the banks of the Zambezi below the alls.

A Zambian government spokesman said it had been evident that the group "had a mission connected with a threat to Zambia's security.

"Therefore, the sentry on duty could not have taken these people to be innocent. His duty was to defend the power station."

The government said it deeply regretted that the shootings had led to the deaths of innocent people, but added that they should have been warned about areas which were not safe to visit.

Last Friday, Zambian President Kenneth Kaunda wept as he told a gathering that the two Canadian girls had been "shepherded to their deaths" by Rhodesia for propaganda purposes.

According to the report in today's Star, all witnesses to the incident had been "cowed into silence" and "indications in Lusaka are that President Kaunda has had the truth deliberately kept from him by his security forces with the connivance of members of his cabinet, including Grey Zulu, minister of defence."

Reporter Wilf Nussey, whose story did not contain any direct quotes by witnesses, said he had discovered that some of the people who saw the incident "shouted angrily at the troops to stop shooting.

"Marjan Drijber was finally hit by a burst of machine-gun fire when the troops

MONKEY BUSINESS

CHESSINGTON, ENGLAND (UPI) — The Chessington Zoo has come up with a new way of increasing its chimpanzee population — show some mildly blue chimp sex films.

And if that doesn't work, a spokesman said, the zoo may show the chimps some of the hard-core stuff.

Zoo officials said Monday that they showed chimpanzees at the zoo a British Broadcasting Corp. television documentry showing other chimps kissing and cuddling.

Most of the Chessington chimps loved it and copied every move, a zoo spokesman said.

"We hope to hear the patter of tiny chimpanzee feet here soon, and all thanks to the film." said spokesman Andy Bowen.

Ban Lifted

TRAIL (CP) — Health Minister Dennis Cocke said Monday he would lift his present ban on spraying remote forest areas on Northern Vancouver Island but would not allow it on 5,000 acres near populated areas.

The minister announced his decision here after discussing the matter by telephone with deputy-minister Dr. G. R. Elliot.

Elliot is to prepare a map showing the allowable limits of spraying the pesticide, known as fenitrothion, Cocke said.

"We will not allow spraying at all in any area where it could be a threat to people," he added.

A halt on spraying was announced by the minister on Thursday.

He said serious doubts had been raised about the use of the nerve-gas type of spray on lands in the Port Alice area owned by Rayonier of Canada, Ltd., MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. and the Crown.

They 'Sold Out'

VANCOUVER (CP)— Fishermen have "again been sold down the river" in the latest reciprocal fishing agreement with the United States, fishermen's union president Homer Stevens charged here.

"I'm disgusted," Stevens fumed.

Stevens, who attended the Canada-U.S. talks as an adviser said he was particularly disappointed at Canada's failure to use all it's bargaining powers in the negotiations.

"It was again a case of Canada backing down to the U.S. policy of taking more than it gives," said Stevens.

Stevens said he disagreed with a statement by Joe Garcia, president of the Pacific Trollers Association, that Canada's compliance with the agreement was a case of going along with the "lesser of two evils."

Garcia said the agreement does increase the existing imbalance in favor of the U.S. of salmon bound for each other's rivers.

But he said it was brought about because of the U.S. policy of absolutely refusing to bring the Alaska fishery into the talks and the trollers association was therefore supporting the treaty as the lesser of the evils.

Garcia said the alternative was total dissolution of any working agreement between the two countries.

"I don't agree with Garcia's views. Canada did not use all the levers it has in negotiating this agreement with the Americans. The points we have were not put forward forcibly by the Canadian delegates," said Stevens.

He said the new agreement

Price-Rigging Claimed Reason for Food Hike

TORONTO — Excessive profiteering, monopoly controls by supermarkets and price rigging led to Canada suffering the second highest rise in food prices among Western countries in 1972, the Ontario Federation of Labor said Monday.

The federation produced figures to show that retail food prices in Canada rose 8.6 per cent during 1972, double that of the United States and only marginally lower than in France.

This represents a 270-300 per cent increase in food costs between the farm gate and the dinner table, a report said.

But the OFL, aiming most of its criticism at supermarket chains, was unable to breakdown supermarket expenditures.

Despite letters to every major supermarket chain asking for details of labor expenses "we received negative replies from everyone," OFL president David Archer said.

"What this report is trying to do is find out who takes the gravy," Archer said.

Archer said the report will be submitted to the federal government in the hope that legislation will be passed to force supermarkets to release these details.

"Monopolistic control of processing, packaging and selling allow major supermarket chains to escalate and rig prices at will, the report stated.

"The poor-mouth posture of the food chain stores presented to the public is in itself a direct contradiction to what is really happening," the report said.

"Chain owners are laughing all the way to the bank."

A freeze on prices at this point "would simply consolidate prices at their highest level and allow them to float even higher when the restrictions were lifted," the report adds.

If also charged supermarket chains with "soaking the poor."

"Prices are usually higher in low-income areas than they are in higher income districts," the report said.

In Ottawa the newly-appointed chairman of the government food prices review board warned, meanwhile, that prices increases will not stop just because the board exists.

Beryl Plumptre said there would be further price increases in the near future and emphasized that while the board can study them and suggest solutions, it has no power to force retailers and processors to hold the line on rising food costs.

Davis Lying, Red-Faced MP Charges

By IAIN HUNTER
Times Ottawa Bureau

In the Commons Lundrigan called "lies and fabrications" the minister's claim Saturday that the Tories are promoting a 50-mile fishing limit off both coasts compared to the 200-mile limit which the Liberal government claims.

Red in the face, the MP refused to withdraw his charge in the House and repeated it to reporters later outside the chamber while Davis looked on.

"He knows he's a liar. He knows it's a fabrication. He knows it was deliberate.

"He should be man enough to stand up for the sake of our system and clarify his remarks," Lundrigan snapped.

The fisheries minister indicated later that he will not take action against Lundrigan, and said that there are statements in the printed record of the debates this session which he could produce to show that his remarks were well-founded.

What caused the furore in the Commons Monday was a speech made by the fisheries minister in St. Andrews, N.B., Saturday in which he announced Canada's intention to press its claims to the 200-mile fishing limit on both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts.

But he said during that speech that he couldn't resist taunting the Conservatives for their record on the question.

"They are boldly talking about a 50-mile limit. Little Iceland is going for 50 miles so Canada might be so bold to do likewise. That is Conservative thinking for you," Davis had said.

Asked by reporters later if he had lied, Davis replied: "No, I am very careful about anything I say."

He stated that the Tories are stung by his success in pushing Canada's territorial limits seaward and said there are quotes in Hansard which he could produce to show that the Conservatives think Canada should push for a 50-mile limit as Iceland has done.

Thepa ssage which he was apparently referring to was in a speech by Lundrigan in the House Feb. 15 in which the Newfoundland MP was attacking Davis for not pushing Canada's fishing interests hard enough.

The government won't present any case at next year's Law of the Sea Conference in Chile because "the fishery does not fit into their major strategy for the Canadian nation, he added.

HEAT HITS SKYLAB TEST

HOUSTON (UPI) — Skylab commander Charles (Pete) Conrad told mission control in a secret radio talk today he thought space station temperatures were levelling off in the 80s and this might interfere with an important test of man's ability to work in weightless space.

Conrad said he thought the heat would be satisfactory for the rest of the 28-day mission with the possible exception of a bicycle exerciser designed to see if astronauts are weakened by prolonged exposure to the lack of gravity. (See also Page 16.)

"He allowed how the device does not ride in Skylab as it did on earth and he doesn't think the crew may be able to follow the full protocol (test plans) on it," the National Aeronautics and Space Administration said in summarizing the secret talk.

According to ground rules established before the mission began, such secret talks are to be held only in cases of "extreme operational emergency." NASA public affairs officer John King said the talk was not justified under those rules.

Fisheries 'Sellout'

has worsened for Canadian fishermen an imbalance in which they have lost an average 12 million pounds of salmon each year to the Americans over the past 20 years.

"The reaction of Canadian fishermen will be that their government has sold them down the river," said Stevens.

Stevens said he had made his views known in his advisory capacity during the negotiations, which concluded in Ottawa last Friday after earlier meetings in Washington and Seattle had failed.

"I was opposed to the settlement and I spoke strongly against it," said Stevens.

"There was only one way to counter balance the American threat. We could have said to them to keep all their boats outside Queen Charlotte Sound, Hecate Strait and Dixon Entrance.

"We could also have told them to keep their boats outside the Gulf of St. Lawrence and the Bay of Fundy, on the east coast," said Stevens.

Garcia and Stevens were in agreement on one point: That Canada should continue to press for equalization of fish catch to correct the imbalance they claim now favors the Americans.

Garcia said reciprocal fishing rights are necessary so that Canadian fishermen can harvest Canadian salmon that migrate southward into American waters.

He expressed the hope that further talks in October between the two countries will bring about more realistic solutions to the West Coast salmon problems.

"how well communities are being served and if there is room for expanded service by the provincial government."

British Columbia Hydro is understood to be planning an expansion of services on the lower mainland, freeing some of their Pacific Stage Line buses for service elsewhere in the province.

If the government purchases Vancouver Island Coach Lines, it is believed the up-Island bus run would become part of the government-owned Pacific Stage Lines service.

The Island bus company is employee-owned, formed when Pacific Stage Lines sold its Victoria-Vancouver run to B.C. Hydro. At that time B.C. Hydro was not interested in the up-Island bus service and the airport run.

Vancouver Island Coach Lines has 48 buses — a new $70,000 vehicle was added today — and is third behind B.C. Hydro (Pacific Stage Lines) and Greyhound, which is an international firm.

He said he was not eager to sell all or part of the company but would listen to any government offer.

Wayne McArthur, a spokesman for Pacific Commuter (four buses) and Tweed Line Tours (four double-deckers) said he, too, had held discussions with Parker but the talk did not get around to money.

He said the government seemed to be mainly on a fact-finding mission at this stage, although the possibility of a sale was mentioned.

McArthur said he was "not that anxious to sell" but was still considering the matter.

Drivers Keep Plates Under Gov't Scheme

British Columbia drivers — not the vehicles — will retain their licence plate numbers permanently under the new government automobile insurance system, Transportation Minister Robert Strachan said today.

Strachan held a press conference at which he explained the working details of the government insurance plan, which will become effective for all drivers March 1, 1974.

Strachan did not reveal premium rates which will be charged under the new plan. He blamed the lack of figures on the failure of the Insurance Bureau of Canada to include the B.C. drivers statistics in its annual publication of data used by automobile insurers across the country.

At the same time, Strachan indicated he does not favor a system of term payments for insurance premiums.

Under the government plan, licence plate numbers issued to individual drivers will stay with the driver when the person sells or trades his car, truck or other licensed vehicle. If he buys another vehicle, the plates will be put on that vehicle after the purchase is completed.

Strachan explained the new insurance plan as working in this way:

Before March 1, 1974, each B.C. driver will obtain an insurance policy based on his vehicle at the same time that he renews his vehicle's registration. On the driver's birthday, he will obtain an insurance policy based on his driving record.

The latter policy will carry a standard charge of between $8 and $16. Drivers with penalty points for violations will pay increasing premiums which Strachan said will rise "very sharply" according to the number of points.

Optional coverage on the driver's vehicle will be available in a similar manner to the private insurance industry currently operating in B.C.

For the first time, however, coverage for all perils, including fire and theft, will be compulsory. A maximum deductible amount of $200 will likely be used, as in Manitoba and Saskatchewan.

Lesser deductible amounts will be available at increased cost to the driver.

Strachan said 41 claims branches for the Insurance Corporation of B.C. will be established throughout the province. Insurance policies will be available at some of these centres, but most policies will be purchased through individual agents for the corporation.

One claim centre will be established in the Victoria area but Strachan did not divulge the location.

Strachan said he favors lump-sum payments for insurance premiums because they are less costly and simpler to process.

Asked if insurance premiums could be paid with Chargex cards, Strachan conceded that this is a possibility.

Strachan said the present system of demerit points for driving violations will be continued.

Appointments to ICBC positions were also announced:

Hugh B. Earle is appointed senior executive for the automobile plan. Robert J. Jones will be senior executive for underwriting. Robert W. Adams will be senior executive for administration. Gordon Root is a pointed senior executive for marketing.

Minister Resigns

It was the second resignation of a senior Japanese political figure within 24 hours.

Earlier, the speaker of the House of Representatives, Umekichi Nakamura, tendered his resignation after being censured by the opposition for saying he had cheated them in mediating an end to their boycott of parliamentary sittings.

moved to a better vantage point. She screamed and was carried away, apparently dead, by the flooding Zambezi River while the troops continued to shoot at her."

At one point, The Star added, one of the soldiers noticed that Miss Drijber was a woman and told the others to stop firing at her.

But, The Star said, a man in plainclothes looking on remarked that the Arab Black September guerrilla organization had used women to blow up Israeli airliners.

"During all this the Zambian troops were in a state of high agitation, sweating profusely.

"They had been seen before to arrive on duty carrying bottles of beer, but there was no indication whether they were drugged or drunk on this occasion."

Nussey added that Zambian police had warned witnesses, most of them Africans, that they faced "dire penalties" if they talked about the tragedy.

The Star said that people around the junction of the third and fourth gorges, where the tip of a long Rhodesian promontory lies oppostie what is called the Silent Pool and the power station, first heard shots from automatic weapons at shortly before 2 p.m. May 15.

"When the Zambians opened fire they killed Christine Sinclair almost immediately and wounded John Crothers, who fell into a niche behind a rock with his feet towards the power station and lay unmoving.

"Some of the watchers were on the edge of the gorge about 100 metres above the river and others right behind the troops at the bottom, where there is part of the power station complex reached by a cableway or 'trolly.'

"From behind the cover of rocks and bushes, the five Zambians kept on shooting at Crothers. He was reasonably sheltered and bullets spattered the rock around him, chipping off pieces.

"The person who had jumped into the river was around the point from him, up to the shoulders in water, sitting on a submerged shelf and hanging with one arm on to a higher rock, with head resting on the arm.

"The people down below saw long blonde hair and realised it was a woman. Others looking through binoculars from the top saw it too, and then the shouts of protest began.

"Protests were also made that the troops were shooting into another country but the policemen waved this objection away and became angry.

"The troops had been shooting at the woman, Marjan Drijber, but could not hit her from their vantage point nearer the fourth gorge side of the junction.

"So they moved upriver a short distance, taking cover as they went as if under attack from the opposite bank.

"Miss Drijber did not appear to be badly hurt at this stage, if at all, because she was watching alertly and looked towards Mr. Crothers a couple of times.

"The Zambian soldiers set up a new vantage point near the C-station at the bottom of the gorge, where they were roughly three metres above the surface of the river.

"They mounted a machine-gun like a Bren gun on a tripod and most of them stood around it while one prepared to feed ammunition and the other to shoot.

"At this moment, one of the soldiers his rank is not known because they do not wear badges on their camouflage saw the target was a woman and ordered the others not to fire.

"The onlookers heard this with relief. But about 10 minutes later, at about 3:45 p.m., firing started again and Miss Drijber screamed, a high-pitched woman's scream, then vanished into the river.

In Ottawa, an external affairs spokesman said Canada is not satisfied with the Zambian explanation of the shooting and has asked for additional investigations.

He said the Canadian government has received different versions of the incident from the Rhodesian and Zambian governments, as well as the Canadian official sent to investigate the incident.

But the spokesman said the government is not prepared to release the different versions because it does not know which is correct.

"We are not in the position to comment at the time being."

the weather

Cloud has been thickening slowly today along the north coast and west coast of Vancouver Island as a new weather system moves in from the Pacific. Temperatures rose sharply in the interior Monday reaching 80 in Lytton — the highest in Canada. The mass of high pressure affecting most of B.C. is expected to move slowly eastward, allowing the new cooler system to move in from the coast. Temperatures in most regions Wednesday will be steady or a little cooler, with some light rain in coastal areas.

"The British Virgin Islands will issue the first official coins in its history on June 30, 1973, honouring its first 200 years of constitutional government with representation."

Derek Cudmore, C.B.E.
Governor of the British Virgin Islands

Those who recognize its significance will have an exceptional opportunity. The opportunity to acquire the very first coins of a government — at the time they are first issued.

This opportunity is open to you now. You can own a complete Proof Set of "The First Official Coinage of the British Virgin Islands" — a historic first issue as well as a collection of unusually beautiful coin of the realm.

The beautiful bird coins of the British Virgin Islands

This new coinage depicts the exotic birds of this fabled paradise. The birds that inhabit the more than 40 islands in this region of the Caribbean are some of the most fascinating and beautiful in the world.

To assure that the designs for these coins would be both authentic and artistic, the British Virgin Islands chose a sculptor who is renowned in the fields of coin design and medallic sculpture. He is Gilroy Roberts, dean of American medallic artists, who sculptured the famous portrait of John F. Kennedy for the U.S. half dollar and whose series of art medals — Roberts Birds — has won widespread acclaim for painstaking attention to detail.

To capture the full beauty of the birds, Mr. Roberts travelled to the Islands to sketch them in their natural surroundings, at rest and in flight. Later, in his studio, he turned his sketches into detailed sculptures from which the coining dies were prepared. The coins were then struck by the skilled craftsmen of The Franklin Mint, the U.S. affiliate of Wellings Mint. The result is a collection of coin of the realm that is, in every sense, a work of art.

1973 Proof Sets available for a Limited Time

The number of Proof Sets minted will be exactly equal to the number ordered by June 30, 1973. No other Proof Sets of this historic first year's issue will be produced. A strict limitation has been imposed on the number of Proof Sets that any one collector may order. Therefore, no order will be accepted for more than 4 Proof Sets. Each complete Proof Set of the 6 coins will be housed in a deluxe presentation case, accompanied by a Certificate of Authenticity certifying to their Proof Status. The official issue price of each Proof Set is $15. Uncirculated specimen sets of the 6 coins will be available at the official issue price of $11.50 per set. These specimen sets, in a vinyl wallet, will be available until the authorized production limit has been reached.

Orders should be mailed by June 30, 1973

To receive your sets of these unusual bird coins — "The First Official Coinage of the British Virgin Islands" — please complete the order form below and mail it directly to Wellings Mint Ltd., 70 Galaxy Blvd., Rexdale, Ontario. The final date for ordering Proof Sets is June 30, 1973. Any orders for Proof Sets postmarked after that date cannot be accepted and will, regretfully, be returned.

'...Hear That, You're Going to Die'

"I shot you in the guts and you're going to die. You hear that, you're going to die."

Charlie Scarr, 27, the victim of a Jan. 23 Esquimalt shooting which resulted in a charge of attempted murder against John Howard McGee, told his version of the story to a B.C. Supreme Court jury Monday.

McGee, 27, of 819 Condor, had invited Scarr and a man named Larry Shaw to his home to look at his gun collection. McGee's girlfriend, identified only as Miss Gow, was also there.

The woman had gone to bed and the three men began to argue in the living room, said Scarr.

Miss Gow appeared in the bedroom doorway and asked them to calm down. The conversation subsided for a short time and then flared again. The woman went into the living room and began swearing at Scarr who swore back, said Scarr.

"Either you get a gun and shoot this bastard or I will," she said to McGee.

"I'm going to kill you," said McGee as he followed her out of the room.

Shaw went into the bedroom after the two and yelled back to Scarr, "Charlie, they're getting guns."

"Look, you guys have been bugging me all night to see these guns. I'm just going to get them to show to you," said McGee.

"I really felt weird. I knew something was wrong," Scarr told the court.

As Shaw and Scarr were about to leave, McGee and the woman came out of the bedroom.

"He had a gun in his hand . . . it looked like he was either pushing the safety or still loading it . . . he had it down between his legs as he was walking in," said Scarr.

McGee told the woman to "sit down by Larry and if he bugs you, shoot him," said Scarr.

"He had the gun down between his legs and he just raised it and pointed it at my head," he said.

The gun was lowered to Scarr's chest after McGee's hand began to shake.

"Don't kill us . . . just let us walk out that door," said Scarr.

"If you go near that door I'll kill you right now," said McGee.

In an attempt to disarm him, Scarr moved slowly toward McGee. McGee yelled "and pulled the trigger," Scarr testified.

After the shot, Scarr "advanced toward him and grabbed his forearm." He pried some of his fingers loose and the gun dropped to the floor.

Shaw was yelling in the background, "Charlie, did he really shoot you?" Scarr testified.

"Yeah, he shot me. He got me right in the guts," was the reply.

Scarr quoted the accused as saying, "Yeah Charlie, I shot you in the guts and now you're going to die. You hear that, you're going to die."

Shaw then appeared behind McGee with a gun saying, "You shot Charlie. You dirty bastard, you shot Charlie," Scarr testified.

"Shoot him," said Scarr. Shaw refused.

As Shaw was holding the gun on McGee he "was whining and begging for mercy," said Scarr. The girl was "hysterical" in the background.

Scarr made his way outside, was unable to find his car, and collapsed on the boulevard.

Shaw went to a neighbor's house then returned to Scarr's car and sat on the front seat with the door open. McGee appeared on the front porch and threated to shoot Shaw if he moved, Scarr testified.

"The police finally arrived," said Scarr.

In the courtroom, Scarr was not permitted to relate any conversation that took place during the evening in the absence of McGee.

Red Cross Can Save Aid Group

By SUSAN RUTTAN
Times Staff

The Red Cross holds the key to the survival of a Local Initiatives Project home aid program it sponsors — unless another sponsor is found.

The Canadian Red Cross Society Home Aid Group has an excellent chance of getting a grant extension to the end of November, John Atcheson, Canada Manpower's Island co-ordinator of direct employment, said today.

But to get the extension beyond the present May 31 deadline, the group's sponsor, the Red Cross, must apply for it, he said.

"At that time she indicated that the Red Cross didn't want to carry it on."

Mrs. Medley said today: "It seems to have served its purpose," of the L.I.P. project, which has employed eight women as free homemakers for the past 14 months.

The people the L.I.P. workers were helping are eligible for help through welfare, and the provincial government is doing more for elderly people than ever before, she said.

"In the meantime nobody's going to suffer," said Mrs. Medley.

Mrs. Medley said she wouldn't consider applying for a grant extension until she had received the last federal payment on the present grant.

Atcheson said this 10 per cent holdback on grant money at the end of the project is standard procedure, experienced by all L.I.P. projects.

Curtis to Call Andras

Saanich MLA Hugh Curtis said today he will wire Manpower Minister Robert Andras expressing his support for the home aid project.

Curtis has already written Victoria MP Allan McKinnon protesting termination of the project.

Curtis added the project was good both in its service to the community and in its employment of the eight women.

"I sense that the Red Cross is on the defensive about the thing," he said.

"The whole thing has been blown out of all proportion and I'm only sorry Curtis didn't get in touch with me," said Mrs. Medley.

Red Cross homemakers can take care of any elderly or ill people now cared for by the free LIP workers, she said. The standard Red Cross fee of $2.25 an hour for homemaker service is waived for people who can't afford to pay it.

"We have never yet turned down a legitimate claim on us because of money," said Mrs. Medley.

Mrs. Evelyn Nieman, who heads the LIP group and is hoping somehow to carry it on, said the group has 65 active cases at present, mainly elderly.

Atcheson said he has got Ottawa approval to invite seven humanitarian LIP projects in the area, including the home aid program, to apply for extensions till the end of November.

Most have already sent in their applications, he said.

He said he would consider asking some group such as the Victoria Order of Nurses to assume sponsorship and apply for an extension.

"We have switched sponsors on other occasions," he said.

$14,000 To 'Talk' With Killer Whales

By DON VIPOND

Is the day coming when man will talk to the animals?

An expedition leaving Victoria soon — one which has been compared to the "Kon-Tiki" — hopes to make one of the opening moves.

Bankrolled by a $14,000 federal grant, four young men will sail up the west coast of Vancouver Island early in June to try opening a face-to-face dialogue with killer whales in their own world.

They go in a 32-foot yawl powered by sails alone, with a musician and a keyboard which can transmit sound under water, with the blessing of local scientists and with a conviction it's time man tried a sociable meeting with a marine creature which some day may teach him a good deal.

Leading the expedition is Bruce Bott, at 25 an experienced sailor and diver who has worked with killer whales at Sealand and owner of the yawl "Four Winds."

With him will be musician and sound man Eric Hoyt, cameramen Peter Vatcher and Michael O'Neill.

Aboard will be about $25,000 worth of sound equipment for both transmitting and taping, diving gear and underwater cameras, bought, loaned, donated or scrounged for what is called project Apex.

Organization behind the project is the Ocean Life Systems Society, a non-profit local group which lists among its objectives determining man's relationship with the ocean and its inhabitants.

The society is also dedicated to tackling the job in a way which seeks a rapport with marine life and to documenting and sharing its experience with the public. The project Apex crew will make a movie of this summer's expedition.

Bott said the Four Winds will pause at isolated coves and bays on the West Coast en route to Blackfish Sound near the Queen Charlottes, "to make ourselves available to an encounter with killer whales."

The choice of sails only (apart from two 14-foot sweeps) is deliberate. The Four Winds wants to meet the whales in as close to a natural setting as possible. The crew will keep a 24-hour watch.

Killer whales talk to each other, sometimes in patterns. The sound gear can record that chatter and the keyboard could duplicate patterns, sending them back.

The underwater cameras are "in case we are invited in." Each of the crew will keep a log, recording his own observations and impressions.

Off the north end of Vancouver Island the Four Winds will meet three more members of the project. Grahame Ellis, the man who first trained Haida at Sealand, Jim Hunter and Jeremy Boultbee will conduct parallel studies using a powered rubber boat.

Bott sees the project as part of a much-needed ecological survey by man, an audit of the life the oceans nurture. From this must come an understanding of how man relates to marine life, he says. The society has plans for continuing research.

In a letter to the Opportunities For Youth program in support of the grant application, George Mackie, chairman of UVic's biology department, praised the "perceptive" approach to learning more about whales in their natural habitat.

"Important biological insights may well result," he wrote.

"The study has additional value in its potential for increasing public awareness of the almost human attributes of whales and of the need to treat them as something more than spectator objects in marine zoos or sources of blubber.

"I fully expect this project to capture the public imagination in much the same way that Kon-Tiki did."

In a similar letter of support, provincial museum director Bristol Foster said knowledge of killer whales in their natural habitat is so sparse the project is bound to produce useful information and possibly make a major contribution to scientific knowledge.

Christopher Brown, executive assistant at the Vancouver Public Aquarium, wrote that his institution is a good example of the kind of operation could make use of the material produced.

In the spring of 1970, an expedition from Sealand trapped five killer whales behind nets in Pedder Bay. Bruce was one of the drivers charged with ensuring the nets were intact.

He and another diver helped rescue Chimo, the white whale which died last year, when she became enmeshed in a loose net and was drowning. Her cries for help could be heard for about 500 yards under water, he recalled.

Although the other whales swam by at arm's length while the divers were hacking away the net with knives, none interfered with the rescue.

They knew what the divers were doing, says Bruce.

And while several of the whales were able to burst through the nets the first night and escape, all five had returned by the morning.

Why did the whales come back?

Former Postman 'Free to Leave'

Swanbeck, 43, was convicted May 15 of stealing mail and mailbags which had been missing three years before being discovered by Victoria police.

In addressing the judge, defence counsel Harold Turnham said the charge, theft of the mails, has "very sinister overtones," but Parliament had removed the minimum sentence to deal with cases like Swanbeck's.

He described the crime as "more an offence of carelessness rather than dishonesty."

As a result of the charges, Swanbeck's activities have been confined and "he, of course, will be discharged from the post office" which is punishment in itself, said Turnham.

He asked Drake to consider a suspended sentence or fine.

Prosecutor Brian Smith said "Parliament historically regards this as a very serious offence" carrying a maximum penalty of 10 years.

Having said that, Smith agreed with Turnham's suggestion. Drake said the offence appeared to be "entirely out of character" and there was no need to impose any deterrent for other postmen.

He granted the discharge, looked at the accused and said "Mr. Swanbeck, you are free to leave."

Outside court, Swanbeck jokingly poked a newspaper reporter on the shoulder and said "the fist is greater than the pen."

Whiz-Bang of a Straw Fight May End Future Mall Dances

It was a "whiz-bang of a straw fight . . . like being in the middle of a mid-summer blizzard, it was fascinating."

But that straw fight and a minor incidence of bottle throwing which happened at the same time may have scuttled further street mall dances during next year's Victorian Days.

Mall co-ordinator Cliff Clarke said today the event was a success, but the "results, unfortunately, were not too beneficial to Victorian Days, so I doubt that it will be held again."

Clarke said younger patrons stayed on after the dance closed shortly after 11 p.m. They dispersed about 2 a.m.

Clarke said there was no damage to stores, parked cars or sound equipment.

"It was something for the kids and highly successful. But I personally wouldn't recommend another in a confined area. You need a huge, open area."

Among the events which took place were appearances by more than 10 bands, eight choral groups, two barbershop quartets, two dance revues, a kiddies' costume parade, the Canadian Scottish Regiment (Princess Mary's) pipe band, the drums and bugles of Artillery Cadets and several itinerant youth groups.

A live show took place every noon at one or more of three stages and some organized entertainment was scheduled every half-hour on Saturday from 10 a.m.

Despite criticism of the mall, Clarke thought it met expectations even though the organizers had "no experience and no funds. That's quite a combination, but it worked."

Merchants who were critical appear to be in the minority, Clarke said.

The charge that the mall was shoddy, Clarke said the things used were provided free — for example, the construction company barricades.

Booths had to constructed by the operators using their own limited resources and doing their best, he said.

OAK BAY SEEKS ISLAND CLEANUP

Oak Bay will write to the provincial parks department urging cleanup and more control of vandalism on Discovery Island, donated as a provincial park by the late Capt. E. G. Beaumont.

Ald. Brian Smith told council Monday he was appalled to read in the Times that Beaumont's old home on the island had been ransacked and damaged.

He was also concerned about the personal papers which vandals had strewn over the floors.

The council will also write the Provincial Archives to ask that Beaumont's letters and other personal effects be saved.

Council Orders Probe On Apartment Switch

Oak Bay municipal solicitor D. M. Gordon was instructed by Oak Bay council Monday to investigate whether the owner of Hampshire House has applied to the Land Registry Office to change the building from an apartment to a condominium.

Council will also invite submissions from Hampshire House tenants on the proposed change-over.

Richard Field, who rents one of the apartments, at 1159 Beach Drive said Hampshire House owner had sold out to a man from Utah. He said the price of the apartments would be $40,000.

"He sounded out many of the residents," Field said, "on whether they are prepared to purchase. We're violently opposed to providing a huge profit to an American developer."

Field estimated the profit would be $500,000 to $600,000.

"We are paying rather fabulous rents and are quite content to do so," he added, "but we are not prepared to pay that kind of price for a six-year-old building."

Penny Parking on Way Out

City traffic engineer Dave Campbell said today there will probably be a recommendation to council to eliminate use of pennies in 1974.

"It means purchasing new meters and modifying the ones we've got," he said.

Reason for the change is because of labor costs involved in collecting and sorting the coins.

Campbell said that six million of the eight million coins deposited in meters last year were pennies.

Nurses Get 10% Hike

Registered nurses and psychiatric nurses employed in government institutions will receive the 10-per-cent civil servant salary increases recently negotiated by the British Columbia Government Employees Union.

Provincial Secretary Ernie Hall announced Monday the salary increase has been extended to cover the 1,800 nurses.

Both groups have agreed to the new scale which is retroactive to April 1 and means nurses earning less than $750 a month will get an across-the-board increase of $75. Those earning more will get a 10-per-cent hike.

Nurses with added responsibilities on night shift will get an extra $15 a month, up from $5.

Fire Dousing a 'Pit-y'

What a bloomin- pit-y!

This was the reaction of Alds. Norman Pimlott and John Goult Monday night when Oak Bay council voted to have cement pits for beach fires built on Willows Beach. Fires on the sand will be banned.

"I think it will be a pit-y," Pimlott said after the vote went against him and Goult.

Both he and Goult said it was wrong to take away the freedom of people to build fires on the beach. Both said they wore scars from burns they had received from beach fires in their youth but felt they were well worth it.

"We like to regulate everything," Goult said, "we don't like anything that may bother us. There's a great deal to be said for beach fires. We're getting a little bit Big Brother about this."

The move to ban beach fires and build six cement pits for fires instead came after police chief John Green asked for a ban on beach fires.

Green said 89 permits had been issued since April 1, 84 for Willows Beach. He said the police forces' work load didn't allow time for each fire to be checked.

Green said that since April 24 one small boy had burnt his hand in the embers of a fire, the fire department had been called out twice to douse smoldering logs, one call being after midnight.

In addition, early one morning youths set fire to garbage cans in the area and left the fire unattended.

He said that some residents had received serious injuries from broken glass and hot embers and had to be taken to hospital.

"This becomes time consuming for both police and fire departments," he said.

HUSH MONEY ALLEGED

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Sun says Vancouver city council is secretly paying off citizens falsely arrested by police in an apparent effort to keep the cases from being made public.

The newspaper says it obtained copies of minutes of closed council meetings as well as confidential reports from city departments which outline the cases of five persons to which payments have been made since mid-February.

The material was turned over by an unidentified alderman who said he was disturbed at council's action in keeping the payments secret, the newspaper said.

The alderman said the practice has been going on for years and has been continued by the present council, dominated by the Electors Action Movement, which won a majority of seats on council in the December, 1972 elections.

Council members supporting the secrecy say they have done so because morale in the police department would suffer if information on false arrests, including the names of arresting officers, was made public and more people might sue if they realized that some individuals had successfully sued for false arrest, he said.

One case reportedly involved an award of $5,000 to Sharon Lee Moore and her husband, Gary Lloyd Moore, who were arrested during the Gastown disturbance in August of 1971.

An accompanying report said Mrs. Moore was arrested, although she took no part in the disturbance and when her husband attempted to stop police, he too was placed in a police vehicle and taken to jail.

NDP Eying Takeover Of Island Bus Lines

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

The provincial government is hoping to purchase all privately-owned bus companies on Vancouver Island so it can greatly expand transit service.

Part of this long-term expansion program includes a new major transit terminal for B.C. Hydro buses, Pacific Stage Lines and possibly streetcars to be located near the legislature, the Times has learned.

The government is hoping to purchase at least some of the local companies before year's end to expand public transit.

Over the longer term, the government is hoping to operate all the bus and coach lines, with the major Victoria public transit centre being located as close to the legislature as possible.

"We are not ruling out the possibility of street cars in Victoria," a government spokesman said.

He said some streets might be designated for streetcars only, others buses only and still others for cars. This plan was in a preliminary discussion stage with the City of Victoria.

The government was also studying the possibility of using the Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway tracks to develop tram travel between cities as an alternative to buses.

The key to the planning would be greater use of rapid transit and less reliance upon cars.

In the immediate future the main target of the provincial government is the hoped-for purchase of Vancouver Island Coach Lines, third largest bus firm in the province.

It runs regularly-scheduled service up-Island as far as Port Hardy. As well it has a regular service between the city and Victoria International Airport.

The government also would like to purchase any small bus firm or tour line that was interested in selling.

A government spokesman said no pressure was being put on companies to sell. But B.C. Hydro was interested in expanding its service and this expansion could interfere with existing companies.

The government was interested in making certain private owners did not suffer economically as a result of expanded government bus services. On the other hand the expansion was necessary and had a high priority with the government.

Further discussions are planned with Island bus company operations.

W. R. McClarty, co-owner (with Ald. Harold Olafson) of London Omnibus Tours, said

Woman Dies in City Blaze

PRINCESS ANNE ENGAGED

The announcement came after months of denials from both the 22-year-old princess and the 24-year-old $100-a-week cavalry officer. They have been constant companions since last December.

The announcement brings into the Royal Family a man whose mother does most of her own housekeeping and whose father is only comfortably off as a director of a pork sausage and ice cream firm.

The Buckingham Palace press secretary, Ronald Allison, said the wedding would be in the early autumn — probably November — either in Westminster Abbey or St. George's Chapel on the grounds of Windsor Castle.

No Progress In Truce: Sharp

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The government announced today that Canada will withdraw its 290-man peace observer force from Vietnam by July 31.

"We are prepared if the parties to the (Paris) agreement wish, to stay for a period beyond June 30, but not later than July 31," External Affairs Minister Sharp told the Commons.

"Canada's decision to withdraw is firm and definite, but the additional flexibility should give the parties adequate time to find a replacement for the Canadian delegation," he said.

The minister noted Canada's previous position that it would pull out of the International Commission for Control and Supervision by June 30 if there was not "substantial progress."

He said this progress had not been achieved and Canada therefore would withdraw.

He said the additional 30 days presence in Vietnam would give more time for the parties to find a successor and for the conclusion of negotiations between U.S. and North Vietnamese negotiators in Paris.

The other ICCS members are Poland, Hungary and Indonesia.

The Canadian contingent on the ICCS was dispatched to Vietnam hours after the ceasefire agreement was signed Jan. 27.

NEWS BRIEFS

Indy Washed Out

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The 57th Indianapolis 500-mile auto race was washed out for a second straight day today after a four-hour 45-minute delay. It was rescheduled for 7 a.m. PDT Wednesday.

Hanging Vote

OTTAWA (CP) — A squeaker vote is expected in the Commons when MPs vote tonight on second reading of a bill to extend the partial ban on capital punishment in Canada for another five years. Opposition party house leaders predict that the abolitionists will win the tight vote.

NATO in Cod War

BRUSSELS (UPI) — Iceland and Britain today accepted an offer by the North Atlantic Treaty Organization to mediate in the cod war between the two countries. Iceland also sent letters of protest to the United Nations Security Council protesting British "aggression."

Arson Suspected

VANCOUVER (CP) — Arson is suspected in a fire at Exhibition Park racetrack early today which did considerable damage to a straw shed. No horses were injured.

50 Watched in Horror As Canadians Gunned

JOHANNESBURG (Reuter) — The Johannesburg Star published today what it said was the "first detailed account of what really happened" when two Canadian girls were killed by Zambian gunfire at the Victoria Falls earlier this month.

The front-page story, which the newspaper said was the result of a week's investigation, said that "about 50 people watched in horror" while five Zambian soldiers shot dead Christine Sinclair, of Guelph, Ont., wounded American John Crothers "and then sniped for nearly two hours at Marjan Drijber hiding behind a rock in the Zambezi river."

The Star said the report "completely refutes the Zambian explanation" that the tourists were fired at by only one sentry who feared they were about to attack a vital power station on the banks of the Zambezi below the falls.

A Zambian government spokesman said it had been evident that the group "had a mission connected with a threat to Zambia's security.

"Therefore, the sentry on duty could not have taken these people to be innocent. His duty was to defend the power station."

The government said it deeply regretted that the shootings had led to the deaths of innocent people, but added that they should have been warned about areas which were not safe to visit.

Last Friday, Zambian President Kenneth Kaunda wept as he told a gathering that the two Canadian girls had been "shepherded to their deaths" by Rhodesia for propaganda purposes.

According to the report in today's Star, all witnesses to the incident had been "cowed into silence" and "indications in Lusaka are that President Kaunda has had the truth deliberately kept from him by his security forces with the connivance of members of his cabinet, including Grey Zulu, minister of defence."

Reporter Wilf Nussey, whose story did not contain any direct quotes by witnesses, said he had discovered that some of the people who saw the incident "shouted angrily at the troops to stop shooting.

"Marjan Drijber was finally hit by a burst of machine-gun fire when the troops

Spraying Ban Lifted

TRAIL (CP) — Health Minister Dennis Cocke said Monday he would lift his present ban on spraying remote forest areas on Northern Vancouver Island but would not allow it on 5,000 acres near populated areas.

The minister announced his decision here after discussing the matter by telephone with deputy-minister Dr. G. R. Elliot.

Elliot is to prepare a map showing the allowable limits of spraying the pesticide, known as fenitrothion, Cocke said.

"We will not allow spraying at all in any area where it could be a threat to people," he added.

A halt on spraying was announced by the minister on Thursday.

He said serious doubts had been raised about the use of the nerve-gas type of spray on lands in the Port Alice area owned by Rayonier of Canada, Ltd., MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. and the Crown.

MONKEY BUSINESS

CHESSINGTON, ENGLAND (UPI) — The Chessington Zoo has come up with a new way of increasing its chimpanzee population — show some mildly blue chimp sex films.

And if that doesn't work, a spokesman said, the zoo may show the chimps some of the hard-core stuff.

Zoo officials said Monday that they showed chimpanzees at the zoo a British Broadcasting Corp. television documentry showing other chimps kissing and cuddling.

Most of the Chessington chimps loved it and copied every move, a zoo spokesman said.

"We hope to hear the patter of tiny chimpanzee feet here soon, and all thanks to the film," said spokesman Andy Bowen.

They 'Sold Out'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Fishermen have "again been sold down the river" in the latest reciprocal fishing agreement with the United States, fishermen's union president Homer Stevens charged here.

"I'm disgusted," Stevens fumed.

In return, U.S. trollers will refrain from fishing off the West Coast of Vancouver Island, except for a small area at the entrance to strait of Juan de Fuca.

"It was again a case of Canada backing down to the U.S. policy of taking more than it gives," said Stevens.

Stevens said he disagreed with a statement by Joe Garcia, president of the Pacific Trollers Association, that Canada's compliance with the agreement was a case of going along with the "lesser of two evils."

Garcia said the agreement does increase the existing imbalance in favor of the U.S. of salmon bound for each other's rivers.

But he said it was brought about because of the U.S. policy of absolutely refusing to bring the Alaska fishery into the talks and the trollers association was therefore supporting the treaty as the lesser of the evils.

Garcia said the alternative was total dissolution of any working agreement between the two countries.

"I don't agree with Garcia's views. Canada did not use all the levers it has in negotiating this agreement with the Americans. The points we have were not put forward forcibly by the Canadian delegates," said Stevens.

He said the new agreement

Price-Rigging Claimed Reason for Food Hike

TORONTO — Excessive profiteering, monopoly controls by supermarkets and price rigging led to Canada suffering the second highest rise in food prices among Western countries in 1972, the Ontario Federation of Labor said Monday.

The federation produced figures to show that retail food prices in Canada rose 8.6 per cent during 1972, double that of the United States and only marginally lower than in France.

This represents a 270-300 per cent increase in food costs between the farm gate and the dinner table, a report said.

But the OFL, aiming most of its criticism at supermarket chains, was unable to breakdown supermarket expenditures.

Despite letters to every major supermarket chain asking for details of labor expenses "we received negative replies from everyone," OFL president David Archer said.

"What this report is trying to do is find out who takes the gravy," Archer said.

Archer said the report will be submitted to the federal government in the hope that legislation will be passed to force supermarkets to release these details.

"Monopolistic control of processing, packaging and selling allow major supermarket chains to escalate and rig prices at will, the report stated.

"The poor-mouth posture of the food chain stores presented to the public is in itself a direct contradiction to what is really happening," the report said.

"Chain owners are laughing all the way to the bank."

A freeze on prices at this point "would simply consolidate prices at their highest level and allow them to float even higher when the restrictions were lifted," the report adds.

If also charged supermarket chains with "soaking the poor."

"Prices are usually higher in low-income areas than they are in higher income districts" the report said.

In Ottawa the newly-appointed chairman of the government food prices review board warned, meanwhile, that prices increases will not stop just because the board exists.

Beryl Plumptre said there would be further price increases in the near future and emphasized that while the board can study them and suggest solutions, it has no power to force retailers and processors to hold the line on rising food costs.
